White House Order Eases Restrictions On Leave

Federal Employes To Get More Time Off to Conduct Personal Business

By Jerry Kluttz

The White House last night ordered Federal agencies to relax restrictions on annual leave to give employes time off to conduct personal business.

"All supervisors," the memorandum said, "should be directed to exercise a liberal attitude toward granting employes short periods of leave for the conduct of personal business." It went on to say that leave should be taken at times when it won't interfere with war work.

The White House recommendation suggested that leave be restricted on Saturday so as "to maintain the continuity of Government business on Saturday afternoons."

Vacations Won't Be Longer

Federal workers, however, won't get longer vacations under the order. Vacations, the memo said, should be curtailed in wartime. The average vacation in Government is now two weeks or 12 days, and that leaves the employe 14 days he could take in short periods, as the memorandum suggests, every two or three weeks, if he so desires.

Even before the war many Federal agencies restricted leave from 12 to 18 days for all purposes and the remainder was allowed to accumulate from year to year.

The memorandum to Cabinet officers and heads of agencies was signed by William H. McReynolds, the President's administrative assistant on personnel matters. However, it's reported that the time-off principle was approved in substance by the Cabinet last week. Moreover, the Government's labor-management committee of the Civil Service Commission recommended that leave be liberalized.

The leave order apparently kills the plan of several agencies to lengthen the workday by from 20 to 40 minutes and to give employes either half a day off every other week or half a day off every week. Time off under either of these plans would be earned and not chargeable to annual leave. Federal Works employes are now voting on the plan and Commerce employes had expected to vote on their working hours next week.

Text of the Order

Text of the order is as follows:

"There has been recent discussion of ways and means whereby Federal employes in both the departmental and the field services can be afforded sufficient opportunity for short periods of absence from work to permit them to attend to necessary personal matters such as shopping for necessities, meeting doctors' and dentists' appointments, and performing various household chores. The lengthening of the workday and the workweek, the elimination of Saturday half-holidays, the difficulties of transportation, manpower shortages in retail trade, and the natural desire of employes to be free from the criticism of absenteeism have combined with other wartime conditions to make this a real problem requiring attention.

"It is the policy of the Government that all administrators and supervisors should recognize this problem and should solve it by a liberal attitude toward the granting of short periods of annual leave for the conduct of personal business.

"During wartime the right of employes to be absent for lengthy periods to the full extent of their

Truman Report

Curb Urged On Tire Rayon Program

The Senate's Truman Committee last night recommended against further expansion of facilities to manufacture rayon for tire cords, asserting that War Department tests failed to show rayon superior to cotton in Army cord tires.

Acting Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Rubber Director William M. Jeffers both immediately slapped back in swift rebuttal of Truman Committee conclusions.

Patterson said the Army would continue to use large, heavy duty tires made of rayon cord because "the superiority of rayon cord for this purpose is common knowledge."

Jeffers said both industry and War Department experts "disagree" with the committee statement that rayon's tire superiority to cotton was unproven. Said Jeffers: "We don't want another case of too little and too late without an insurance policy."

The Truman Committee's report, "strongly urging" that rayon plant expansion be checked, said the Army tests "were not scientifically set up" but even on the basis of these "cotton cord has proved the equal of rayon in most types of

Viereck Guilty On All Counts, Jury Finds

Third Trial Lasts 21 Days; Faces Possible Sentence of 12 Years

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

George Sylvester Viereck, 59-year-old author and Nazi agent, was found guilty at 11:20 last night on all six counts of the Federal indictment charging him with violation of the Foreign Agents Registration Act.

The jury of nine men and three women deliberated eight hours and 20 minutes before reaching a decision. At 11:30 p. m., Justice Bolitha J. Laws opened court, and a few minutes later the jurors filed in to announce their verdict.

Justice Laws is expected to sentence Viereck Friday. Before adjourning court, he denied a defense appeal for a new trial and sent Viereck to jail for the night. John J. Wilson, Viereck's attorney, had asked that his client be released on bond. Mrs. Viereck, he said, was not well and should have her husband with her at this time.

Viereck heard the verdict, which may send him to jail for a maximum of 12 years with a $6000 fine, with an impassiveness bordering on unconcern. His wife, however, sat in stricken silence, her eyes downcast.

On request of Attorney Wilson, Justice Laws said he would take into consideration the year in jail Viereck has already served on his first conviction for violation of the act.

Issues Outlined

In an hour and a half-long charge early in the afternoon Justice Laws told the jurors the question they had to decide was whether or not the defendant had failed to register with the Secretary of State the names of all the foreign principles for which he worked, and whether he had given full details of the activities he engaged in their behalf when he registered as an agent.

The "sharp issue" in this case, he charged them, is "whether Viereck was or was not an agent of the German Reich."

Close of the 21-day trial was climaxed yesterday afternoon with Prosecutor McNulty's closing statement in which he declared evidence and testimony proved conclusively Viereck had used his registration with the State Department as a "camouflage" for his far more extensive propaganda activities. The designation, "author, journalist and publicist," as reply

Russians Repel Eleven Furious Nazi Assaults, Gain 10 Miles

By Lynn Heinzerling
Associated Press Staff Writer

London (Saturday), July 17.—Smashing through new German reserves hastily rushed into the threatened Orel area, Russian forces added 6 to 10 miles yesterday in their advance on the vital city which the Germans have been fortifying for a year and a half.

The Soviet midnight communique and a special bulletin earlier said the advancing Soviet troops met 11 counterattacks with concentrated fire power and repulsed the Germans with heavy losses.

Previous announcements had told of gains of 12 to 28 miles on the Orel front, and one Russian broadcast, recorded by Reuters, said the Soviets had reached a point within 15 miles of the city as they pushed in from three sides.

Plight Called Desperate

(The British radio said the plight of Orel was so desperate the Germans were forming a "taxicab army" using every type of truck and automobile to rush troops northward and eastward of Orel in an attempt to stem the Russian drive. The broadcast was heard by the United States foreign broadcast intelligence service.)

The Germans were reported frantically strengthening their lines on the Orel-Bryansk railway which also was menaced by the Soviet counteroffensive.

The Reuters Moscow correspondent said Premier Stalin made a special visit to the Orel front recently where he personally directed the plans for the present Soviet drive.

The midnight bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor said that in one sector of the Orel area the Red army shattered 36 of 80 tanks flung at them by the Germans and routed two enemy regiments.

An "advance to some extent" in the Kursk area south of Orel was reported in the special bulletin, while the midnight communique said the Germans lost 2000 men in a Russian attack that resulted in the capture of an enemy defense sector.

U. S., British Tanks in Drive

American Sherman and British Churchill tanks were reported spearheading the Red Army drive.

It was presumed that the midnight bulletin's totals of 2000 Germans killed, 61 tanks disabled and four planes destroyed were in addition to tabulations given in the earlier special communique. This would boost overall German losses in 12 days to about 62,000 men, 3242 tanks, and 1766 planes.

In the Belgorod direction where the earlier German offensive had been smashed there were only "intensive reconnaissance activities," the communique said.

The German radio said Marshal Semeon Timoshenko was directing the Russian attack which "is now extended to the whole Orel bulge." The broadcast by Transocean's military correspondent, Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, recorded by the Associated Press, admitted that the Russians had begun counterattack in the sector south of Orel.

The Germans suggested that another Russian offensive was in the making in the Leningrad area. Berlin broadcast a D. N. B. dispatch saying the Russians had attacked south of the old Czarist capital after a heavy artillery preparation, and had been repelled. The Russians partly lifted the long siege of Leningrad during the winter.

Allied Forces Within 8 Miles Of Salamaua On New Guinea

By C. Yates McDaniel

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Saturday), July 17.—More than 100 American planes unloaded 82 tons of bombs on Japan's defense of the Munda air base Friday in one of the largest and heaviest air attacks delivered in a single day against one area since the opening of the New Georgia campaign.

Strong formations of Avenger torpedo bombers and Dauntless dive-bombers rained high explosive and fragmentation bombs on enemy positions around Lambeti, two miles east of the airdrome.

In the afternoon, another large formation of raiders struck at the Munda airfield, key point in the central Solomons.

Bombers Hit Near Salamaua

The absence of any reports on the further progress of American jungle fighters bearing down on Munda led to the belief that heavy rains may have slowed the pace of the land drive. Last reports indicated the drive was settling down to the methodical liquidation of enemy strong points, which are made up of foxholes and log bunkers.

Seven hundred miles to the southwest, where Australians and Americans were last reported moving on Komiatum, within 7 miles of the enemy air base of Salamaua, New Guinea, Boston attack planes struck at Japanese positions around Bobdubi, 2 miles nearer the base.

The menace to Salamaua has been increased by the capture of Japanese positions at Mubo, 12 miles below it.

Seaplane Base Fired

Above Australia, on the Aroe Islands, Hudson bombers started large fires at the enemy seaplane base of Taberfane.

The night raiders on Taberfane were followed in daylight by long long range fighters who strafed barges and villages in the area.

To the north of New Georgia, Allied planes for the third straight day struck at enemy shipping off Vella Lavella Island.

12 Big Allied Warships Reported In Mediterranean

London (Saturday), July 17 (AP).—The Rome radio in a broadcast heard by the London Daily Mail said today that six British battleships and four aircraft carriers and two American battleships had entered the Mediterranean for an "attack on Europe."

There was no explanation of the phrase "attack on Europe," but the Italians frequently have speculated on Allied attacks other than those on Sicily.

Italy Offered Surrender or 'Utter Defeat'

Roosevelt-Churchill Ultimatum Demands Ousting of Fascists

By James D. White
Associated Press Staff Writer

On the point of a sword, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill yesterday offered harried Italy the choice of "honorable capitulation" or utter defeat—and the world watched eagerly last night for any sign of a crack-up in Mussolini's regime.

Few expected an immediate general uprising in a land ridden by Black Shirt militia and German Gestapo. But as time goes on and Allied armies drive closer to the heart of Italy, the high command hopes the Roosevelt-Churchill words will bear fruit among a people already bereft of empire, pounded by blockbusters and retreating before invasion.

The Roosevelt-Churchill message to the Italian people was beamed to the beleaguered peninsula from many broadcast stations and showered in printed leaflets upon Italian cities from Allied planes.

Almost as the message went out, Allied bombs were laying the Italian cities of Naples, San Giovanni,

Baby Flat-Tops Leading Fight On Wolf-Packs

John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

New-type American aircraft carriers have played a leading role in turning the tide of the Battle of the Atlantic, the Navy revealed yesterday in a thrilling account of a series of battles between one of its small new carriers and Nazi U-boat wolf-packs.

Planes of the "baby flat-top" made a total of 11 attacks on Axis surfaced sumarines while protecting Allied convoys in the Atlantic, and chalked up the "remarkable record" of 10 probably kills out of the 11, the Navy said.

Keep Foe Miles Away

Equally important, the fliers of "Escort Carrier B," as the craft was labeled by the Navy, teamed with destroyers and other antisubmarine vessels to keep the enemy undersea raiders miles away from their convoys.

"All ships in the convoys protected by Escort Carrier "B" reached their destinations undamaged," the Navy said. "It is believed that this record of defense and attack over a similar period of time has not been equalled by any other vessel in the history of anti-submarine warfare."

Two German U-boats definitely were sunk by the Grumman Avengers and Wildcats of the unidentified "baby flat-top." A total of 41 prisoners were taken from these two destroyed subs.

Eight Possible Kills

Four other of the enemy U-boats attacked were accredited as "very probably kills," while four others were put down as "probable kills."

The Navy said where the results of an attack are classified as "very probably" or "probably" sunk, "there is an excellent chance that

Naples Raked By Furious Allied Assault

Italian City Famed For Beauty Dealt Terrific Air Blows

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 16.—Adopting the R. A. F.'s tactics of crushing and burning one Axis industrial city at a time, the great Allied North African bomber force yesterday turned its fury against Naples, Italy's chief seaport, and transformed it into a blazing inferno—possibly knocked it out as a factor in the waning Italian war effort.

Four huge waves of American Flying Fortresses deluged the stricken port with thousands of explosives and incendiary bombs, shattering the Royal Armory, demolishing acres of harbor and industrial installations and wreathing the city, famed for its one-time beauty, in smoke that billowed 20,000 feet into the air.

Attacking at Will

Allied headquarters estimated the damage done by the staggering blow to be as great as that inflicted upon the Sicilian port of Messina during the previous day and night, when an area two miles long and one mile wide was gouged from the heart of its harbor section.

It is through Naples, port for the capital of Rome, that the bulk of reinforcements and supplies for the hard-pressed Axis defenders of Sicily must be moved now that the more convenient route across from the toe of the Italian boot apparently has been knocked out by the devastating attack on Messina.

The enemy's aerial defense of Sicily itself rapidly was approaching complete collapse as clouds of

12 More Towns, 20,000 Axis Prisoners Taken By Allied Forces

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa (Saturday) July 17 (AP).—A desperate battle raged late yesterday within 13 miles of strategic Catania, whose fall would give the Allies control of much of Sicily without the immediate necessity of occupation, and threaten the Axis defenders with another Cap Bon disaster.

Catania was reported in flames.

Twelve more towns had been overrun by the Allies, six of them by the hard-driving Americans in the interior, more than 20,000 prisoners had been bagged, and gains were scored all along the front from the Agrigento area, on the American left flank, to the Lentini sector 13 miles below Catania where the British collided with the Nazi Hermann Goering Division and repulsed it with severe losses.

(A Vichy radio broadcast said Agrigento, an important Axis troop center, had fallen; Rome radio, heard by N. B. C., also said the Americans had reached that city in a 10-mile gain in the extreme west; and Rome radio also said the Battle of the Cantania Plain probably would decide the issue in Sicily.)

Foe Fighting Doggedly

(In London, the Daily Express said it had learned that American and Canadian troops were pouring into the Catania plain after the capture of Vizzini to attack the main Axis flank defenses while the British army continues its frontal assault.)

Virtually all German forces thus far officially identified as being in Sicily now are concentrated on the Catania plain, seeking to stave off the strategic catastrophe that would be implied by the quick fall of the city itself.

Unsupported by their own air units, the Germans were reported fighting doggedly against growing odds.

Encountering units of the Hermann Goering armored division north of Lentini, where they had gathered to attempt a counterattack, the battlewise Eighth Army veterans of Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery hurled them back and inflicted severe losses to continue their northward surge up the island's east coast to the edge of the Catania Plain.

After dumping hundreds of tons of high explosives on Sicily and the Italian mainland, Allied planes today dropped leaflets bearing the message of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, who told the people the time had come "to decide whether Italians shall die for Mussolini and Hitler—or live for Italy and civilization."

Dropped by Thousands

Hundreds of thousands of the leaflets, carrying to the Italian people the virtual ultimatum of the Allied leaders to surrender honorably or be blasted out of the war, fluttered down from skies now largely dominated by Allied air forces.

Observers, who believed the enemy had staked everything on the

Nazis Put Mines Behind Italians, Prisoners Say

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, July 16 (AP).—Italian prisoners are complaining bitterly of the system of defense in Sicily by which they were put in the front line with a German minefield laid at their backs.

They said the Germans refused to tell them where the mines were located and remained well to the rear while the Italians had to bear the first shock of the Allied attack.

The Italians suffered many casualties when they had to retreat through the minefields.

'A Base on Balls'

Martinique Vindicates Policy On France, Roosevelt Asserts

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday pointed to Martinique as a vindication of this Government's policy toward France, and also as an answer to those who have been directing what he called vicious propaganda at the State Department.

Mr. Roosevelt, at his press conference, said that the problem of Martinique had worked out fairly well, now that Admiral Georges Robert has turned over the reins to a representative of the French National Committee of Liberation.

A great many people, even some isolationists, the President said, wanted us to go down there immediately with a great battle fleet and a landing force to take Martinique and Guadeloupe. The result, he said, would have been a lot of bloodshed and a headache in the actual running of the French Islands.

For about two years, Mr. Roosevelt went on, the Administration had been taking it on the chin, keeping quiet, and seeking to avoid bloodshed in favor of a peaceful settlement of the problem.

So, the President said, the United States Government waited it out and got a base on balls. The reporters laughed at this, and the President joined in.

The President said we had hoped to get that base on balls from the beginning. Now, he continued, it seems quite clear that every part of the French Empire not under Axis domination is working for the defeat of Germany and for the liberation of France itself.

This Government, he said, has kept aloof from the internal political side of French affairs, and has consistently refused to become involved in political rivalries and political ambitions of individuals or of groups.

Out of this, he said, has come all kinds of vicious propaganda attacking the State Department and the Government as a whole. There have been many unfair—or, to use a more polite word—incorrect rumors, reports and statements that were derogatory to a perfectly well-ordered plan that goes back several years.

The President said that we have had a consistent policy since the fall of France, our effort being to

Fleeced of $8500

Swindle Victim to Purchase War Bonds Now—It's Safer

James D. Price, 31, owner of a "money making" machine which cost him $8500 but never paid dividends, henceforth is putting his money in War Bonds—it's safer.

Price was complaining witness yesterday in a larceny-after-trick case and here's the story Detective Sergt. Elwood Groves of the Robbery Squad says Price told him:

Last January Price was approached by a man who introduced himself as "Doc" Jackson, a chemist, who had a "sure thing" for the right investor. But Price wanted to be shown so Doc took him to his room in a hotel.

Here Price was introduced to Doc's friend, custodian of a fabulous machine, and to Price, the mystery of easy money was unveiled. Taking a dollar bill from his pocket, Doc washed it in acid, bleaching it white. Doc produced a $100 bill and put in the machine next to the bleached bill. The potions of alchemy then produced two $100 bills. Price was convinced. He saw it happen.

A quick trip to the bank and Price was back with $8500, which he earned at a gasoline station he operated at Nichols Avenue and S Street Southeast. He had 82 $100 bills and six $50 bills. Doc put two of his own $5 bills on either end of Price's package of money, and Price expected to make

OPA to 'Standardize' Goods

Roosevelt Signs Measure To Extend CCC Six Months

President Roosevelt yesterday signed into law legislation extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for six months, but found it necessary to define some of its terms.

In fact, the President said conflicting provisions of another bill left the meaning of the CCC measure uncertain. He signed it only with the express understanding that it permits the OPA to "standardize" a commodity where it is essential to effective price-fixing.

The President referred to the language of the Taft amendment to the CCC law, modifying a flat ban on OPA grade labeling action imposed in the war agency appropriation bill.

What the President wanted to make certain of was that Congress had NOT closed the door to price ceilings on commodities by grades, in banning authority for OPA to order merchants to label their goods accordingly.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that the war agency bill grade-labeling ban had been construed to prohibit the price administrator from making use of standards in any case, however essential they were to price control, unless such standards had been previously established by industry or Government action.

"Such a construction would cripple price control because trade standards are frequently lacking or,

Sicily Fight, Nazis' Own, Italian Says

Relieves Hartle

Gerow Heads Field Units In Europe

GEN. LEONARD T. GEROW

By the Associated Press

London, July 16.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Townsend Gerow has succeeded Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle as commanding officer of United States Field Forces in the European theater, Army headquarters announced today.

The nature of Hartle's new assignment was not disclosed.

Gerow (pronounced Ja-row) is a 54-year-old native of Petersburg, Va., and like the Chief of Staff, Gen. George C. Marshall, is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute.

The 55-year-old General Gerow is a former chief of the United States Army Staff's War Plans Division, a post which he took December 16, 1940.

He was assgined to command the Twenty-ninth Division on February 24, 1942. He was succeeded as chief of the war plans division of the Army general staff by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, now commander in chief in the Mediterranean theater.

General Gerow had a record of service on the Mexican border, in the first World War, in the Philippines and in China, as well as at various Army posts in the United States.

Known to his men as "General Gee" and called by his middle name, of Townsend by his old friends, Gerow is regarded as a field soldier who is a stickler for perfection in training.

He has a brother, Lee Saunders Gerow, who is a brigadier general.

In the first World War he won the Distinguished Service Medal and the decoration of the French Legion of Honor for his work in Paris as officer in charge of purchasing and disbursing for the Signal Corps.

General Gerow married the former Miss Mary Louise Kennedy of St. Paul. They have no children.

Culture Minister Appeals to Ally For Aid in Defense

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bern, Switzerland, July 16.—Rome has let it be known clearly that the battle of Sicily is Germany's fight.

On top of the continued pessimistic tone of the Fascist press, preparing the people for further setbacks, Minister of Culture Alessandro Pavolini added an appeal to Berlin which implied both criticism and a lack of Italian ability or will to support the struggle alone.

Germany is "defending her own soil in Sicily," said Pavolini in the newspaper Il Messaggero.

Dispatches from Rome further alluded, for the first time since the invasion of Sicily, to the reaction of the Italian people against propaganda. Some newspapers, trying to lighten the gloom, have published frivolous articles like the one that parachute troops were sent on ahead to locate good tennis courts for the relaxation of advancing Allied troops.

"This does not react well on the people," said a Rome report to the Neue Zuercher Zeitung. This was the first published confirmation of private information in foreign diplomatic circles that when the theory of invasion became a reality, the propagandist-inspired optimism turned into quick gloom and apathetic resignation.

Despite references to counter movements on the plains of Catania, the Fascists continued to talk gloomily about the military situation.

Guido Baroni in Il Popolo di Roma told the people that they must realize that the situation on the eastern front is such that Italy could count only on her present fighting resources plus what might come from Germany proper—in other words Axis troops cannot be withdrawn from the Balkans, France or other points that Berlin is busily trying to guard.

Although Germany was reported to be seeding reinforcements to Italy, editorial comment tended to support reliable private information from Rome and Berlin that the Nazis are basing their present plans of strategy on the supposition that Italy will be put out of the war.

Baroni paid tribute to American resources. He said Italy's food prospects are not comparable to those of England after France fell because "we don't have the prospect of American provisioning." Here again, Italy must count on continental resources which Baroni avoided praising.

success of a counterattack, were confident that the Allies, with an "appreciable number of tanks" already in Sicily, could deal successfully with the armored forces sent by Hitler to help the Italians resist invasion.

Thereafter, observers declared, the enemy will be forced to launch a defensive rearguard action and begin a withdrawal from the island.

Although British gunners had smashed the first-line tanks of the Goering division, the Fifteenth German armored division was believed being held in reserve for further attempts to oppose the onrushing British columns.

The Fifteenth Division was said to be a collection of units originally destined for Tunisia. Organized after the fall of Tunisia, the units were given the name of the old Fifteenth Division which was wiped out in North Africa last May.

Resistance at Vizzini

Earlier reports said the Fifteenth German armored division had entered the fight against the British along with the Goering division, but confirmation was lacking.

Canadians and other British troops ran into stubborn resistance at Vizzini, about 25 miles inland from the east coast at a vital road junction on the second line of communications to which the enemy had fallen back.

The town changed hands several times before the British finally brought it securely under their control, putting them in command of the central highway connecting the Eastern and Western Fronts of the Axis. A further British advance from Vizzini would immediately menace the towns of Militello and Scordia at the western entrance to the Catania Plain.

While Axis troops sought desperately to halt the ground advance, the enemy was powerless to cope with the overwhelming might of Allied air and naval forces, whose ceaseless bombardment of Catania engulfed Sicily's ranking eastern port in flames.

The harbor city near the base of Mount Etna was smoking like a volcano itself, according to the German radio, which reported the fuel dumps were ignited by repeated naval shelling and air attacks.

Allied warships bombarded the Catania airfield and other coastal positions of the enemy while fleets of Allied sky raiders pounded the Axis at every point of concentration on the island and smashed at vital shipping and industrial centers on the Italian mainland, almost at will.

On the Southwester Front, the American Seventh Army of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., which took 5 of the 12 new towns, some of them of the greatest strategic importance, was credited with the capture of 15,922 of the more than 20,000 prisoners now in Allied hands.

The Allied headquarters communique said "severe losses were inflicted upon the enemy" by the American Seventh Army which "advanced several miles across difficult hill country and captured further important positions."

The British Eighth Army, the communique said, "made further progress against German troops who desperately contested every inch of the ground."

While the Allied war bulletin declared "the speed of the advance is very satisfactory," it called attention to the limiting factor of Allied transport and supporting weapons at the present stage of the campaign.

(In a broadcast heard in London, the Rome radio declared that "the real and true decision for the island will be reached in a new battle which has already virtually started in the Catania Plain.")

At an Allied command post it was disclosed that in the British drive northward an important communication point near the coast was secured by the cooperation of air-borne and ground troops.

Official sources also disclosed that large numbers of tanks, guns and other booty had been captured.

Commenting on Italian claims that all Allied parachute troops had been rounded up, these sources said: "All air-borne operations that have been carried out accomplished their missions. It is true that the Italians have announced several parachute attacks in areas where no such attacks were ever made and they may have rounded up those nonexistent parachutists."

With the announcement of the capture of 12 more towns, it was disclosed for the first time that parish priests have negotiated with Allied military authorities in enlarging the occupied zone after the Fascist bosses fled.

Towns Listed

The towns listed in today's communique as captured include Canicatti, Niscemi, Vittoria, Campobello and Palma dei Montechiaro, taken by the Americans, and Canicattini Bagni, Comiso, Biscari, Vizzini, Sortino, Modica and Riesi.

Vizzini is on the slopes of the Iblei Mountains, about 25 miles west of Augusta.

Niscemi is about 9 miles from Caltagirone on the same highway, southwest of Vizzini.

Canicatti is 15 miles northeast of Agrigento, on the extreme western flank and about 13 miles inland.

Vittoria is on the coastal railway, a few miles west of Comiso, which was seized earlier by the Allies.

Biscari is about 6 miles inland and east of Gela.

Campobello is to the rear of the American Western Front at Naro and Canicatti.

'Fort' Survives Collision With German Plane

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

United States Eighth Army Air Force Headquarters, England, July 16.—The Flying Fortress "TS" collided head-on with a Focke-Wulf fighter plane whose pilot apparently had been killed but the bomber limped home to England to complete its fifth raid.

"TS" made a perfect bomb run over its target, the German airdrome at Amiens-Glisy, Wednesday, and headed for home under a strong cover of American Thunderbolt fighters.

The formation had just crossed the French coast when it encountered three Focke-Wulf 190's, which slipped through the fighter escort and dived on the bombers.

Third Nazi Goes Down

The ball turret gunner, Sergt. Arthur L. Tucker of River Bank, Calif., took on the third.

O'Connell's bullets ripped into the fuselage of the first Nazi fighter, which burst into flames and plummeted down. Black, watching his tracers pour into the belly of the second fighter, saw the attacking aircraft zoom up out of control. His last burst evidently hit the pilot.

In a split second, the Focke-Wulf hurtled forward crazily and crashed into the Fortress' No. 3 engine with an impact that knocked the big bomber out of formation.

The collision tore off the propeller, cut half way through the wing and a third of the way through the horizontal stabilizer. The top turret was jammed. The ball turret was shattered and all the instruments went bad, according to Second Lieut. Edwin R. Manchester of Wilmington, Del., the pilot.

The No. 3 propeller crashed into the No. 4 engine, tearing off the top cowling and part of the valve, allowing oil to splatter out.

Enemy Flees Homeward

Sergt. Wade McCook of Howell, Mich., the tail gunner, recovered just in time to blaze away as other fighters made passes at the crippled Fortress from above. McCook got one of the Nazi fighters before five Thunderbolts sent the last enemy fighters hurrying for home.

The damaged plane was losing altitude at the rate of about 500 feet a minute.

As the ship crossed the Channel, crewmen lightened the plane by throwing out everything that could be spared.

Manchester was unable to drop the landing gear and was forced to make a belly-landing with the help of the copilot, Second Lieut. Robert L. Weniger, jr., of 1206 Missouri Avenue, Houston, Tex.

"We landed so gently, we never felt the jar," one of the crew said.

Big Auto Plant New Target of R. A. F. Raiders

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), July 17.—United States medium bombers smashed at the railway yards at Abbeville, France, yesterday, while reports of a Swiss air alarm early today indicated another R. A. F. night attack on Italy.

Moving in at dusk with a thick blanket of Allied fighters, the American bombers started fires in the German-occupied railway area as British and Dominion fighters engaged German interceptors, a communique said. Three Focke-Wulf 190s were destroyed by the Allied fighters, while one bomber was missing.

The Swiss alarm was reported in a Reuters dispatch from Zurich.

The Italian shortwave radio also shut down twice.

The bombardment of Abbeville followed a night attack by the R. A. F. which cut an arc of destruction through occupied territory from the Low Countries to northern Italy.

The R. A. F.'s big bombers which have been following a practice of knocking out German war plants in rotation, picked off a brand-new target in the moonlight last night, delivering what a communique described as a concentrated and effective attack on the great Peugeot motor vehicle works at Montbeliard, France.

Montbeliard, near the Swiss frontier 10 miles south of Belfort, was raided for the first time.

The Peugeot works are second only to the Renault plant, and since the virtual destruction of the latter factory, Peugeot has become one of the key spots of Hitler's resuhffled war industry. The plant employs 10,000 workers and turns out 6000 to 8000 trucks a year.

While auxiliary intruders were plastering airfields and railways in Germany, France and the low countries, home-based Lancasters jumped across the Alps, hitting an electric transformer and switching stations at an unidentified site. This was the northern end of a squeeze joined in on southern Italy by Mediterranean-based bombers.

Seven bombers were lost in the night's operations from English bases.

Returning airmen said antiaircraft fire at the Peugeot works was negligible, and the air ministry said the Germans apparently had few guns to spare for defense outside their homeland.

Bomb hits were concentrated in a group of buildings, and smoke from fires rose 2000 feet.

Army Won't Say

Col. Poletti Believed to Be in Sicily

A dispatch from Sicily yesterday reported that "a former Governor of New York" was aboard one of the invasion ships, and a preliminary survey in Washington last night narrowed down the mysterious personage to Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti.

The name of Herbert H. Lehman, director of the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation, was ruled out when Thomas F. Reynolds, information chief for that agency, said that Lehman was in town. It was first believed that Lehman might have gone to Sicily to supervise the feeding of the liberated populace.

In North Africa, it has been announced that food for Sicilians followed the Army's initial landings, but Reynolds said that "up to Thursday night the OFRR has not been operating yet in Sicily."

The possibility that Poletti, who succeeded to the governorship when Lehman resigned to take the Federal position, was strengthened by the recollection that Poletti, when he was commissioned in the Army, was assigned to duty in the civilian affairs division in the Office of the Chief of Staff.

Speculation was immediately forthcoming that Poletti, whose parents were born in Italy and who has made several broadcasts urging the Italians to overthrow Mussolini, might become military governor of the occupied area in Sicily. The War Department, however, refused to comment.

Other former New York Governors still living are Charles Evans Hughes, Charles S. Whitman, Alfred E. Smith and Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The first three named are believed too old for such a venture, and the fourth had a press conference yesterday at the White House.

keep the French fleet and naval air bases from falling into Axis hands. That effort succeeded, he said, until last November.

When the Americans and British landed in French North Africa, the Germans invaded unoccupied France and the French scuttled their fleet.

In the meantime, the President said, we have been working in close cooperation with all Frenchmen everywhere who were patriotically resisting the Axis powers, and who have been seeking to encourage the people of occupied France to keep alive the principles of liberty and freedom.

Thus, the President concluded, he felt that the policy had worked pretty well.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Hull denounced as fantastic a published report that President Roosevelt had on two occasions asked Prime Minister Churchill to arrest Gen. Charles de Gaulle, fighting French leader. He told his press conference that no person in this Government had dreamed or even thought remotely of any such action.

Robert Leaves Martinique; Natives Cheer

By the Associated Press

Fort De France, Martinique, July 16.—Admiral Georges Robert, who stepped down from his post as Governor of Martinique following a revolt of the army garrison, left for San Juan, Puerto Rico, today as Henri-Etienne Hoppenot, the new Governor, said his administration would aid the United Nations war effort in every possible way.

Martinique's three years of repressed exuberance broke out last night when excited, wild-eyed natives danced in the streets, sang the Marseillaise and hurled uncomplimentary remarks at Robert and his fellow Vichyites.

Shortly after midnight Maj. Jean Sarrat, former commander of the garrison who escaped from the island last December, was acclaimed by the parading Negroes when they discovered him strolling along the waterfront. The Negroes streamed out of a dance hall where they were holding their Holy Roller-like festivities and pressed around Sarrat's group, skipping and singing through the streets behind them.

Robert Escorted to Boat

Earlier Hoppenot and his cabinet had escorted Robert and about 10 of his closest followers to the boat in which they sailed later today. Sarrat and other anti-Vichyites stood by, saluted and shook hands with Robert without any signs of bitterness.

Economic life on the island is still paralyzed because of a lack of commodities, although automobiles are freely running on a mixture of 8 per cent gasoline and 90 per cent rum. The populace is eagerly awaiting the unloading of foodships from the United States now standing off-shore.

Arrives in San Juan

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 16 (AP).—Admiral George Robert, former Governor of Martinique, arrved here today.

Among a few followers accompanying him were the former commanders of the cruiser Emile Bertin and the aircraft carrier Bearn, two of the French warships that have been immoblized at Martinique since France fell.

Roosevelt, Churchill Warn Italy to Surrender or Face 'Utter Defeat'

and Foggia in ruins.

London reported that the Berlin radio, in the first Axis reaction to the message, quoted "Berlin circles" as saying it was "typically Anglo-American—making political capital from certain initial military successes in the false assumption that a wedge could be driven between Germany and Italy."

[From London the International News Service quoted the Italian news agency Stefani as saying:

["If Britain and the United States want to defeat Italy, they must defeat her weapons and pay the price."

[Axis propagandists termed the ultimatum "nothing but a diversionary movement, an episode in the contemporary war of nerves." Editor's Note.]

The full text of the Roosevelt-Churchill message follows:

"At this moment the combined armed forces of the United States and Great Britain, under the command of Gen. Eisenhower and his deputy, Gen. Alexander, are carrying the war deep into the territory of your country.

Blame Troubles on Mussolini

"This is the direct consequence of the shameful leadership to which you have been subjected by Mussolini and his Fascist regime.

"Mussolini carried you into this war as the satellite of a brutal destroyer of peoples and liberties.

"Mussolini plunged you into this war which he thought Hitler had already won. In spite of Italy's great vulnerability to attack by air and sea, your Fascist leaders sent your sons, your ships, your air forces, to distant battlefields to aid Germany in her attempt to conquer England, Russia and the world.

"This association with the designs of Nazi-controlled Germany was unworthy of Italy's ancient traditions of freedom and culture—traditions to which the peoples of America and Great Britain owe so much.

"Your soldiers have fought, not in the interests of Italy, but for Nazi Germany. They have fought courageously, but they have been betrayed and abandoned by the Germans on the Russian Front and on every battlefield in Africa from El Alamein to Cape Bon.

Nazi Hopes Declared Blasted

"Today, Germany's hopes for world conquest have been blasted on all fronts. The skies over Italy are dominated by the vast air armadas of the United States and Great Britain. Italy's sea coasts are threatened by the greatest accumulation of British and Allied sea power ever concentrated in the Mediterranean.

"The forces now opposed to you are pledged to destroy the power of Nazi Germany—power which has ruthlessly been used to inflict slavery, destruction and death on all those who refuse to recognize the Germans as the master race.

"The sole hope for Italy's survival lies in honorable capitulation to the overwhelming power of the military forces of the United Nations. If you continue to tolerate the Fascist regime which serves the evil power of the Nazis, you must suffer the consequences of your own choice. We take no satisfaction in invading Italian soil and bringing the tragic devastation of war home to the Italian people.

Charge Betrayal by Germans

"But we are determined to destroy the false leaders and their doctrines which have brought Italy to her present position.

"Every moment that you resist the combined forces of the United Nations—every drop of blood that you sacrifice—can serve only one purpose: to give the Fascist and Nazi leaders a little more time to escape from the inevitable consequences of their own crimes.

"All your interests and all your traditions have been betrayed by Nazi Germany and your own false and corrupt leaders; it is only by disavowing both that a reconstituted Italy can hope to occupy a respected place in the family of European nations.

"The time has now come for you, the Italian people, to consult your own self-respect and your own interest and your own desire for a restoration of national dignity, security and peace. The time has come for you to decide whether Italians shall die for Mussolini and Hitler—or live for Italy, and for civilization."

Political Surprises Are Hinted in Rome

"Informed circles" in Rome were reported by the Associated Press last night to be hinting at unexpected political developments as the Fascist News Agency, at a late hour, told the public of the British-American warning to capitulate or face the consequences. Foreign observers believed rumored "nonmilitary surprises" would involve some rearrangement of the Fascist regime in an effort to bolster morale. But in Milan Italian stocks took a sharply weaker turn, some shares going down as much as 75 points.

Italy's Fate Was Decided At Casablanca

With United States Forces En Route to Sicily, July 9 (Delayed) (INS).—The decision to invade Sicily was reached at the historic Casablanca conference of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill last January.

After studying military and political conditions in the enemy countries and such questions of global strategy as Russia's demands for a second front, the two leaders decided on the immediate objective of knocking Italy out of the war. The first step toward that objective was designated as the capture of Sicily.

It is safe to state that the subsequent Washington conferences resulted in planning the offensives to follow the invasion of Sicily.

Nearly six months have elapsed between Casablanca and the attack to which we are speeding as this is written on the even of our invasion of Sicily.

was apparent. They were striving to converge their columns moving south and north behind Orel and seal off the base and its masses of men in a maneuver closely akin to that which fashioned the German catastrophe at Stalingrad. Orel is the base 200 miles south of Moscow from which the Germans sprang their own abortive offensive July 5 to pinch off the Russians' Kursk bulge in similar fashion.

The capture of Orel would hardly be less than another German debacle, provided the Russians could slam shut the escape corridor behind Orel into the northern Ukraine.

For the first time, the German radio admitted breaks in their lines guarding Orel without the customary claim that the breaches had been sealed.

The Russians said yesterday that five German divisions were routed and that five others "suffered a heavy defeat." Four of the ten were armored. The Russians said the German air force made 1500 sorties in a single day, slowing the advance somewhat.

Despitc these successes, the Red army newspaper Red Star cautioned against too abundant enthusiasm, and commented.

"We must be ready for even hotter battles."

Chinese Steward Gets Medal Award

New York, July 16 (AP).—Poon Lim, 25-year-old Chinese steward of a torpedoed British freighter, who subsisted mainly on seagulls and raw fish during 133 days alone on a life raft in the South Atlantic, was awarded the British Empire medal today.

Leonard H. Leach, acting British consul general who informed Poon of the award, invited him to England to receive the award personally from King George VI and said the steward was "a living example of the toughness of the Chinese—a toughness that bodes ill for Japan."

We'll Free Aleutians Of Japs, Says Knox

Kiska Undergoes Fifth Bombardment In 10-Day Period

Secretary Knox declared yesterday that "we propose to drive the Japs out of the Aleutians" after the Navy had announced the fifth warship bombardment of Kiska Island within 10 days.

The Navy chief was asked about the significance of the recurrent shelling of the last remaining enemy base in the Aleutians. Some observers have speculated that the recent attacks were preparatory to invasion of the island.

"I'll say what I have said before," Knox answered: "we propose to drive the Japs out of the Aleutians. That is no secret. Just when and how we are going to do it I can't talk about."

Fire Wasn't Returned

The latest bombardment of Kiska occurred early Thursday morning when an American war vessel, probably a cruiser or destroyer, stood off Gertrude Cove and shelled enemy installations in that inlet. Jap shore batteries did not answer the attack.

Most of the recent warship assaults on Kiska have been unopposed. Coastal guns replied to the July 9 bombardment, but did not fire back on the other occasions.

Knox told reporters he did not know what installations the enmy had at Gertrude Cove, which has been the object of a number of the attacks. Most of the Jap strength is believed to be concentrated at Kiska Harbor, 20 miles to the northeast. There has been speculation that Gertrude Cove might be a good landing spot for American invasion forces.

New Office

Adm. McCain Guides Navy Air Growth

JOHN SIDNEY McCAIN

U. S. Navy Photos

DEWITT C. RAMSEY

Rear Admiral John Sidney McCain, veteran naval officer, was appointed yesterday to the new position of Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air with the rank of vice admiral.

The Navy said that the new office had been set up "for the purpose of facilitating the handling of expanding naval aviation, particularly with regard to policy, plans, personnel and logistics."

Rear Admiral D. C. Ramsey, now a task force commander in the South Pacific, was designated to succeed McCain as Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

The Navy said that "broadly speaking, Vice Admiral McCain's duties will be to correlate and coordinate all military aspects of naval aviation within the Navy Department while the Bureau of Aeronautics will continue to deal with the design, procurement and upkeep of aircraft and aircraft equipment."

Admiral McCain, 58, was born in Teoc, Miss., and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1906. He served on a cruiser in the Atlantic during the last war, and commanded the battleship New Mexico from 1931 to 1933. In recent years he has commanded the aircraft carrier Ranger, the Naval Air Station at San Diego and the Scouting Force Aircraft. He was in command of aviation forces in the South Pacific before becoming chief of the bureau of aeronautics last fall.

Admiral Ramsey, 52, was born on an Army post in Arizona, the son of an Army officer, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1912. He became a flier in 1916 and during the last war was inspector of naval air stations in France. Formerly assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Ramsey commanded the aircraft carrier Saratoga and later had command of an aircraft carrier task force during the fighting in the South Pacific. He won the Navy Cross for heroism in the Solomons battles.

Senate Group Recommends Jap Drafting

The Senate Military Affairs Committee recommended yesterday Japanese be drafted "in the same manner" as other residents of the United States.

In a report based on findings of a subcommittee headed by Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky, the committee quoted Army spokesmen as saying "We would like to use these people as soldiers." It also said the War Department has satisfactory methods for "screening out the bad ones" and that already more than 7500 Japanese are in the Army.

The committee also recommended:

1. That disloyal Japanese be placed in internment camps.

2. That loyal, able-adied Japanese be allowed to work under proper supervision "in areas where they will be accepted, and where the Army and Navy authorities consider it safe for them to go."

Asserting in relocation camps operated by the War Relocation Authority, "there is little or no real discipline, and there are many clashes of authority," the committee recommended the regularly constituted arms of the Government, "including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Department of Justice, and the Army and Navy" should assume "full and complete responsibility" for determining the loyalty of Japanese.

Little Carriers Lead U-Boat Fight

the submarine was destroyed."

Because it is often difficult to tell whether a sub has been destroyed or escaped, the Navy is quite conservative in crediting kills. This has led to an expression in the fleet that "you've got to bring back the sub's periscope or the captain's hat" to be allowed credit for it.

Subs Driven Southward

Introduction of the new escort carriers into the fleet, together with the completion of many more antisubmarine vessels, better training of personnel and improved detection equipment and weapons, are believed to be the answer to the much improved picture in the Battle of the Atlantic in recent weeks.

Secretary Knox said yesterday at a luncheon in honor of Brazilian journalists the Allied campaign against U-boats in the North Atlantic has tended to drive the Axis subs southward. The American and Brazilian navies, he added, now are operating as a unified force off the coast of Brazil—"which has become one of the fighting fronts against the submarine."

Many Sea Clashes

Telling of the many clashes of "Escort Carrier B" with German U-boats, the Navy said the first engagement occurred at dusk, when an Avenger TBF dove on a fully surfaced sub and straddled it with depth bombs. No trace of it was seen after the explosions ceased.

At dawn, the carriers' planes took off again and ran into more U-boats. One Avenger attacked and found itself in a battle with the antiaircraft guns on the submarine. He turned his own machine guns on the deck gunners and dropped his bombs, obtaining two "possible" hits under the stern.

A Grumman Wildcat meanwhile sighted another U-boat and called to nearby Avengers. One of them attacked and got a charge home just under the middle of the boat. The crew of this sub and another attacked at noon also tried to fight off the planes with machinegun fire.

More U-boats Sunk

At dusk, two more subs were attacked by the Avengers. In the second assault, there was no doubt of the result. The wounded U-boat submerged, but resurfaced at a steep angle, and started to sink again, hopelessly out of control. It surfaced again and members of the crew popped out of the conning tower to surrender.

An escort destroyer picked up the submarine's skipper and 23 members of the crew. This ended the battle with the particular wolfpack, but it was not long before another was attacking the convoy from all directions. Five attacks were made on the pack and it was driven off with several sunk or damaged.

Three Avengers took part in the next engagement, badly damaging or sinking the single raider. One of the planes was badly hurt by a 20-millimeter shell from the U-boat and its radio operator was wounded, but landed safely back on the carrier.

The next engagement produced another definite kill. Four Avengers and two Wildcats cooperated "to bring back the captain's hat." The submarine was blown up and 17 members of the crew were taken as prisoners.

Bishop to Meet Smuts

Pretoria, Union of South Africa, July 16 (AP).—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York arrived in Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, by air today and is expected here Monday when he will meet Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa.

How 2 Platoons of Rangers Captured Inland Sicilian Town

By Don Whitehead
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the American Invasion Troops in Sicily, July 14 (Delayed). Lieut. Col. Bill Darby picked up a field telephone in his command post on a hill overlooking the Plain of Gela.

"Jim," he said, "we're going to attack. We're going into a deep inland town.

"Now, listen, I'm sending up some assault guns. I'm going to put four self-propelled 75's in your position. So reconnoitre a spot for them.

"I'm sending in one company. If they are fired on we'll blast the hell out of the enemy. I want you to shoot anything that moves while we're getting our stuff up. Okay?"

"Roger," (Okay) came the reply of Capt. Jim Lyle of San Antonio, Tex.

Darby, broad-shouldered, two-fisted commander of the Ranger battalions which stormed Gela on the morning of the invasion of Sicily—a product of Fort Smith, Ark.,—put the telephone on the hook.

"Chuck!" he called.

Lead-Off Man

"Chuck, you're the lead-off man. I know your boys are tired. They've fought hard and they need a rest. But they are the best for this job. You understand?"

"Yes, sir."

Chuck moved off down the hill.

Darby pulled out a bottle of cognac from a bag.

"I found this after we drove the Italians off this hill," he said. "That's when I knew they left in a hurry. You don't leave cognac behind unless you're in a hurry."

There was only a swallow around—a toast to the success of the night's operation.

"This was one tough position to take," Darby said. "If we hadn't had help from that cruiser we couldn't have taken it. We laid salvo after salvo on these positions and the Italians went streaming out. We had to knock out some machine guns but the shelling did the trick."

Company Gets Away

He walked to the crest of the hill and looked at the road. Through the valley marched the first company of Rangers getting off to the starting line.

Second Lieut. Clifton W. Roe, South Portland, Me., platoon commander, reported to Darby.

"I want you to put your tanks by that stone house you see on the ridge," Darby said. "I may use you as supporting artillery. We are going into something we know nothing about. We're going to face it out. We may take this place without a fight. We may walk into a trap. We can't tell. So get in position."

The instructions were simple and direct. Obviously the men idolized Darby, who organized the first American Ranger battalion in England. Fifty of his men were on the Dieppe raid.

"Here comes Sammy," someone said. A slight-blonde young captain with a handlebar mustache walked up.

"I've lifted 19 German teller mines out of the road myself, just beyond the gap," said Sammy. "I went over every yard probing with a bayonet before darkness got me, but I'm positive there are no more mines. I'll drive over the road first if anyone feels bashful."

"No one doubts you, Sammy," Darby said. "You've done a good job."

"Well," said Sammy, "I reached down once and shook hands with a dead German. I saw three bodies out there on the road where the mines were. They went up on one of their own mines."

"Sammy, your mustache is drooping," Darby chuckled. "You better get going and good luck."

Brief Map Study

It was 10:30. We climbed into jeeps and drove down the hill onto the road where troops were marching to their assembly points.

Near the gap in the ridge we pulled off the road under a grove of trees. Darby and his company commanders huddled over a map lighted by the faint glow of a flashlight.

"You'll move on in exactly 20 minutes," the colonel said. "If you are not fired on do not fire. One mile from the town, Shunstrum, you will hold on the town. At the edge of the city, if you get in trouble, fire a steady stream of red rockets. That will be the signal for our artillery. If you're successful, shoot two green flares. That will be the signal for all the rangers to move into town.

"Gentlemen, the best of luck, and we'll see you tomorrow morning."

Jack Belden of Time Magazine and I joined the leading column. Shunstrum gathered his platoon commanders about him, and said:

"I want 15 yards interval between each man. March at a slow pace. We go in alone and with fixed bayonets. Be sure to keep plenty of distance. We don't want to be caught bunched in an ambush."

None of us know what to expect except that there was a garrison of about 400 enemy troops in the town.

We marched in single file strung in a long wavering line along the roadside. There was no sound except the crunch of boots on gravel and the singing of crickets.

"Haunted House"

A soldier stopped and whispered to Belden and he whispered to me "the password is 'haunted house.'"

It was 12:40 a. m. when we reached the top of a ridge and looked out across the valley to see a veritable fortress capping the bare sheer sides of a peak. It was square, solid and formidable against the starlit sky.

The column stopped on the roadside and Shunstrum picked up the radio:

"We are going to move in a few minutes for the attack."

At 3:30 a. m. we stopped, looking upward. It seemed that the town was just above us, quiet and menacing. We crouched under the bank.

Shunstrum called his officers together:

"Kendrick (First Lieut. Collins Kendrick, Macon, Ga.) will lead the first platoon along the side of the road. The second platoon will go up the hill and cover his flank. Let's go!"

We were almost to the top of the slope when machinegun and rifle fire crashed on our right. The Rangers fell to the ground, guns ready.

"Shunstrum to Kendrick . . . Shunstrum to Kendrick . . . what has happened?" the radio crackled.

It wasn't Kendrick's voice that answered.

"Lieutenant Kendrick has been wounded; we ran into trouble," came the answer. "We had two casualties but neither is badly hurt."

"Then pull your men out," Shunstrum said. "We'll shell the damned place."

"You mean you don't want us to go on?"

"Do you think you can?"

"We'd like to try it."

"O.K., but don't take too many chances."

Then came an order for our platoon to withdraw to the road, after we had struggled almost to the top of the slope. So down we went.

Our leader halted the platoon before we reached the road.

"Sergeant, take charge," he said. "I'm going into that town. They can't do that to us."

"You can't storm a city by yourself, sir," the sergeant said. "Wait a few minutes and see what happens."

Tommy guns and carbines poured fire ahead of us. The crash of noise echoed against the hills. There was no answering fire, so we moved ahead of the road and followed it toward the town.

On the road were two anti-tank guns and around us the bodies of 10 Italian soldiers, mowed down by the Rangers' fire.

And just as we were near the entrance of the city the green victory flares arched across the skies. It had fallen to two platoons of Rangers—a fortress that might have been held against a division.

The praise was for Pvt. First Class John Constantine of Brooklyn, N. Y., who started the advance on the town with Pvt. John C. See of Mount Kisco, N. Y.

"We saw the Italians in the road with guns," Constantine said. "So we walked up to about 25 yards of them and I told them in Italian to surrender or we'd blast them out.

"The Italians were ready to surrender but they had two German Officers with them who wouldn't let them. Then one of the men shot Kendrick as we opened fire, but the Germans got away."

Daybreak brought the people streaming from their homes, cheering the Americans.

2 D. C. Area Men Captured By Germany

Two soldiers from the Washington area are held prisoners by Germany, the War Department announced yesterday.

GULICH

First Lieut. Spencer H. Gulick, whose wife Mrs. Elizabeth S. Guilck, lives at 8013 Piney Branch Road, Silver Spring, Md., and Staff Sergt. Roy M. Curtiss, whose parents and wife live at 628 North Carolina Avenue Southeast, are named among 435 Army personnel held by the Nazis.

Lieut. Gulick, according to information received by his wife, was captured April 25 after he bailed out of his plane which was damaged in a fight over Germany. The only injuries he suffered were rope burns from his parachute. A native of Red Bank, N. J., he lived for many years in Cranford, N. J., and was a student at Columbia University at the time he entered the Army, April, 1941. He held a private pilot's license prior to his induction.

His wife, who resides at present with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sterrett, said that she has received two letters from her husband since he was taken prisoner in which he stated that he was safe and adequately fed. Only a week before he was captured, Lieut. Gulick learned that he was the father of a son, now aged 3 months and 2 weeks.

CURTISS

Sergeant Curtiss, his wife said, was captured on his twenty-third birthday, May 21. He is a native of Washington and was graduated from Eastern High School in 1939. He belonged to the basketball team of the school. Before entering the Army in June 1942, Curtiss was employed in the Government Printing Office. Mrs. Curtiss said yesterday that she received a very cheerful letter from her husband, which was written about a week after his capture.

Four additional men from Maryland are also listed. They are:

First Lieut. Harry L. Young, Staff Sergt. Norris R. Phifer, and Pvt. Virgil Perseghin, all of Baltimore, and Tech. Sergt. Mark L. Schaefer, Grantsville.

The following eight men from Virginia are held in Germany:

Second Lieut. Dudley W. Richie, jr., Danville; Staff Sergt. Henry B. Compton, Floyd; Sergt. Robert E. Hansen, and Pvt. First Class Wilford W. Hendricks, both of Richmond; Pvt. Rex B. Lowe, Grimsleyville; and Pvt. Thomas J. McKevitt, Private First Class Lewis R. Dodson and Second Lieut. John Bell Parker, all of Norfolk.

D. C. Gunner Saved After Channel Crash

A report from a United States bomber base in England reveals that Sergt. Edward W. Griffin, 23, of 211 First Street Northeast, recently spent an hour and a half floating about in the English Channel.

GRIFFIN

The Flying Fortress in which Sergeant Griffin served as ball turret gunner was one of a group of bombers that raided a Luftwaffe assembly plant outside Paris. Griffin's Flying Fortress, named the Memphis Blues, had one of its engines shot out of commission before it reached the assembly plant.

Even so, the bomber flew on, dropping a thousand feet below other bombers in the formation so that explosives could be dropped. As it turned home, the ship was attacked by three Focke-Wulfs, and after driving them off, was caught in heavy antiaircraft fire which damaged it in several places.

Two more engines were shot out, leaving only one functioning. The controls were so badly shattered that First Lieut. Calvin D. Swaffer, the ship's commander, of Memphis, Tenn., could not keep the big plane on even keel and was losing altitute at the rate of 400 feet per minute.

Swaffer cut the ship's speed to 80 miles per hour and made a crash landing in the Channel. None of the crew was injured, and an hour and a half later all were rescued by British air and sea rescue craft.

Sergeant Griffin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Griffin, and is a graduate of Eastern High School. He entered the Army last August, prior to which he was a clerk in the Securities and Exchange Commission. In November of last year he was graduated from the Harlingen Army Gunnery School, in Texas.

Gen. Littlejohn Wins D.S.M. For African Task Force Job

Award of the Distinguished Service Medal to Brig. Gen Robert Littlejohn, U. S. A., of 1851 Columbia Road Northwest, for work in the "organization and supply of the African Task Force," was announced yesterday by the War Department.

LITTLEJOHN

At the same time, another general, four officers and three enlisted men were cited. They are: Brig. Gen. Lloyd E. Jones, Columbia, S. C., Distinguished Service Medal, and the Legion of Merit to Col. Robert E. Coughlin, Columbia, S. C.; Col. Joseph E. H. Stevenot of San Rafael, Calif. (posthumous); Col. Charles K. Wing of Carrington, N. C.; Lieut. Col. Frank J. Zeller of Mendocino, Calif.; Master Sergt. Oscar J. Rinehart, Atlanta, Ga.; Staff Sergt. Herman E. Showers, Philo, Ohio, and Sergt. Bill W. Harris, Scottsbluff, Nebr.

General Littlejohn's citation read, in part: "General Littlejohn demonstrated marked aggressiveness, exceptional organizing ability and a superior quality of leadership in rapidly establishing a Quartermaster Service throughout the European theater which met and solved the many unexpected and seemingly insurmountable problems of supply. . . . He created an organization which was largely instrumental, under his leadership, in solving many complex problems in the organization and supply of the African Task Force. His untiring efforts and devotion to duty in this connection contributed markedly to the successful landing of this force in North Africa on November 8, 1942."

General Littlejohn, a native of Jonesville, S. C., was graduated from the United States Military Academy on June 12, 1912, and was appointed captain on May 15, 1917; major on July 1, 1920; lieutenant colonel on August 1, 1935, and to colonel (temporarily) on November 16, 1940. He served in France during World War 1, and later in Illinois, Kansas, South Carolina and at West Point. In 1935 he was appointed executive officer in the Philippine Quartermaster Depot, Manila, P. I.

Italy Reported Purging Officials

Moscow, July 16 (AP).—A Tass dispatch from Geneva today reported that the Italian government had effected a "mass purge" of officials of state institutions, cooperative organizations and the Fascist Party in northern Italy.

The dispatch said that in the last few days hundreds of officials had been dismissed, many of whom until recently were regarded as loyal adherents of the Fascist regime. It said strict police surveillance had been placed over all more or less important state officials and Fascist Party functionaries.

"Station-to-Station" calls cost less, they save your time, and they also reduce the holding time on the lines—those lines which are so urgently needed at all hours by the Government and the armed services for the all-important business of running the war.

So, when it isn't necessary for you to talk to any particular individual at the other end, you will be helping all around if, after placing your call, you will say to the operator, "Station-to-Station, please."

Sicilian Attitude

One of the questions warmly discussed during the period preceding the Allied invasion of Sicily was the Italian people's possible reaction to it. A partial answer to this important question is being vouchsafed by the behavior of the inhabitants of southeastern Sicily. Their attitude thus far has been friendly, to say the least. Instead of being upset by the arrival of the Allies, they give evidence of being relieved. Instead of opposing our troops, they are welcoming them. "Long live America!" one reporter quotes the natives as saying. "At last we've become Americans. Now we'll be protected and fed."

It might be pointed out that the word "Americans" has a special meaning in Sicily. It refers only remotely to citizens of this country, few of whom, in point of fact, the Sicilians had ever met. Its more specific application is to Italians who left Sicily to return with fat bank accounts and glowing reports of a hospitable land where in a reasonable number of years a man could put aside enough money on which to live the remainder of his days in leisure. There are many of these "Americans" in Sicily. Moreover, scarcely a family on the island is without a relative in this country.

To the more cynically minded the pleasure of the Sicilians over the arrival of Americans may seem to be anticipatory of favors to come. At the same time there is undoubtedly an element of genuine friendliness in their attitude. Certainly the Sicilians have no reason to love Mussolini and his German friends—and what is true of the Sicilians is equally true of the Italians as a whole.

Clothing For All

Chairman Nelson of the WPB makes three requests of consumers in regard to clothing purchases: (1) Don't buy any more than you need, (2) don't buy it before you need it, and (3) make it last as long as you can. If these reasonable rules are followed, we are told, there will be an adequate supply of textile products and clothing to meet military and essential civilian needs. We hope that the public will cooperate to make a success of the WPB's clothing program, and thereby avert rationing.

But so far our experience with voluntary conservation plans has been disillusioning. The public has spent and squandered gasoline when it could get it, and created and enhanced shortages of foods and other essential goods by buying runs and by hoarding. This self-defeating scramble to get possession of scarce goods is not typically American. It is a universal characteristic of human nature that has manifested itself in every country involved in this war. Appeals to reason and patriotism are not entirely without deterrent effect, but rationing or some system of control akin to rationing appears to provide the only effective defense against the primitive grabbing instincts of the average man and woman.

So if Chairman Nelson manages to avoid the rationing of clothing, the chief credit will doubtless be due to contemplated changes in methods of production and distribution of fabrics and clothing. If the mills, converters, clothing manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers cooperate fully in the WPB's plans, the consumer will have little incentive to squander money on new clothes as long as his old ones are adequate. For the new clothing program aims to conserve labor by concentrating on the mass production of low-priced clothing. Labor shortages and high production costs, plus the fact that the public has billions of spendable cash, have tended to shift production to higher-priced clothing to encourage wasteful use of limited materials. The changed emphasis will reverse that undesirable trend, and at the same time discourage shopping ardor.

However, the textile industry is already suffering from labor shortages and from deterioration of equipment, aggravated by lack of repair parts. It is, therefore, up to the War Manpower Commission to protect the industry's labor supply. Unfortunately the record here is far from reassuring. Failure to coordinate our manpower and our war production has marked our domestic war program. Thus, Mr. Nelson's intention to push textile production above present record levels by introducing additional working shifts in mills will be difficult of accomplishment. However, if he succeeds in introducing a greater degree of standardization and of simplification of clothing—especially women's clothing—he will have gone a long way toward offsetting the pressure of consumer demands and warding off rationing. For much of our clothing is purchased not because it is needed but because its acquisition satisfies the irrepressible desire for what Thorstein Veblen called conspicuous consumption. If that urge is thwarted, the rest should be easy.

Incidentally, the sound advice handed out by Mr. Nelson to civilians ought to be called to the attention of the Army and Navy officials responsible for recent issuance of new clothing regulations that entail discarding garments still in use. The civilian will be more inclined to mend his wasteful ways if the armed services set a good example by also following a few simple conservation rules. It is pretty obvious that no such example has been forthcoming. Mr. Nelson would get a hand from the general public if he would speak out about the shocking wastefulness in the armed services.

End Of A Feud

It is a pity that the President refused to go into the grave issues which Mr. Wallace raised in his charges against Mr. Jesse Jones. He excuses himself on the grounds of his preoccupation with his war task. "There is not sufficient time," he says, "to determine where the truth lies in your conflicting versions as to transactions which took place over a year and a half ago." With this excuse the President proceeds to pass judgment on both accuser and accused. The sentence is banishment for both from all participation in the job of dealing with foreign countries on economic affairs. Thus the President, by his summary dismissal of the issues and his Draconian punishment of the man who raised them, has shown himself, it seems to us, both timorous and unfair.

The public will think that, aside from the neglect to assess the rights and wrongs of the dispute, the two disputants at least are dealt with impartially. But this is not the case. The accuser is taken completely out of the war effort, for Mr. Wallace had only two war jobs, and both of them disappear as the result of the President's ukase. He is no longer chairman of the Board of Economic Warfare, and, since he was a member of the War Production Board through his post on the BEW, that appointment is likewise ended. Mr. Jones, however, remains at the heart of the war effort. To be sure, his agencies having to do with foreign financing are transferred to the new Office for Economic Warfare under Mr. Leo T. Crowley which now replaces the Board of Economic Warfare. But Mr. Jones can dispense with these agencies and still be the Pooh Bah of this Administration. He remains in the Cabinet as Secretary of Commerce; he functions as a member of the War Production Board and the Office of Economic Stabilization; he is chairman of the Defense Plant Corp., War Damage Corp., Defense Supplies Corp.; he stays head of the RFC Mortgage Co., Federal Mortgage Association, Disaster Loan Corp.; and he goes on being a member of a dozen or so of other boards and agencies. He retains all these offices without anything having been done to probe into a charge supported by yards of data that he obstructed the war effort. By no stretch of the imagination could the treatment given to Mr. Wallace and Mr. Jones be called equal.

That Mr. Roosevelt has done less than justice to Mr. Wallace may be proved by another yardstick. The Board of Economic Warfare may not be a perfect organization, but no other agency has received anything like the praise from Congress. This was demonstrated as recently as the debate on appropriations. The war agencies were then scrutinized closely by Congress. Some were criticized, several found their budgets trimmed considerably, and only one or two of them came out of the ordeal with their estimates approved. The BEW was one of these latter, and, moreover, got a bouquet attached to the approval of its budget. The report of the House Appropriations Committee called the testimony of its work "interesting and illuminating," and said it needed to be read in order "to realize the grave importance of the work that is being done by that organization on the world economic front and the crucial part it is playing in the war effort." The committee chairman dwelt on BEW's work in his speech in Congress. He gave credit to BEW, "wholly and solely," for the fact that there has been continuous and uninterrupted production. This has been due to the success of BEW agents in scouring the world for critical materials. Now, within a month of this encomium, BEW is abolished, and Mr. Wallace, who headed and ran it, is returned to his routine functions as Vice President.

There can be no question that the public airing of disputes between department heads is damaging to morale. But it is the system that makes this publicity inevitable. The President delegates authority but fails to see that his directives are respected. In the Wallace-Jones case he vested in BEW on April 13, 1942, complete control of all public purchase import operations which had formerly been conducted by Mr. Jones. It is Mr. Wallace's contention, and he supports it with evidence, that Mr. Jones "has never been willing to accept" the transfer of his import function, and that he expressed his chagrin by hamstringing—through his control of Mr. Wallace's buying budget—Mr. Wallace's buying and development operations. This was not news when Mr. Wallace announced the fact. It was known at the White House, and there need have been no conflict at all if the President long ago had insisted that Mr. Jones respect the presidential directive or, alternatively, had sponsored a separate budget for BEW's buying as well as for BEW's administration. Instead he allowed the wrangling to go on. Now when the issue is put on his doorstep, he simply ducks it, and calls a plague on both their houses. This is hardly the way, we submit, to get good administration.

Mr. Maxon Regrets

Lou R. Maxon, in his letter of resignation from OPA, does not show that he would have been suited to the post of OPA general manager to which he aspired. He was deputy administrator of that troubled agency, and everybody, apparently, was out of step but Mr. Maxon. That Price Administrator Prentiss Brown should have declined to give Mr. Maxon absolute control over OPA is a good deal less surprising than that he should have ever given the possibility serious consideration.

A self-made advertising magnate, Mr. Maxon presided over the agency's division of information. Public esteem for OPA, at no time very exalted, certainly sank to its lowest ebb during his incumbency. Such publicity as he procured generally centered around his own effulgent personality and consisted in pointing a finger of scorn at the errors and deficiencies of his boss and his associates. His parting blast seems an obvious illustration of the point. He must be a curious public relations expert indeed if he supposes that this sort of indiscriminate backbiting and vilification can enhance public confidence in OPA or further the war effort generally.

A sample of Mr. Maxon's extravagance is to be found in his remark that "the professorial mind, in my estimation, is one of the most dangerous factors in our Government today." This reflects a point of view as parochial and bigoted as that which he decries when he charges the professors with unwillingness to take counsel from practical businessmen. There is room, and urgent need, in OPA for both academic and business backgrounds. Few men of scholastic training, it may be noted, would be guilty of such a doctrinaire diatribe as Mr. Maxon has emitted.

The Post has frequently been critical of OPA and believes that much of its policy and procedure must be reformed. We are conscious, however, of the very real difficulties which beset its course. It is dealing in restrictions upon our normal ways of life which are necessarily disagreeable. We do not believe that these restrictions will be made more palatable by the kind of public relations policy for which Mr. Maxon stood—under which sacrifice is "sold" to the American people as a species of patent medicine. OPA needs less slickness and more downright toughness.

Let us hope, now that Mr. Maxon and his "theories" have been uprooted, that the experienced lawyers, economists and businessmen who have been wrestling long and earnestly with OPA's problems will get down to the business of administering effective price control. Certainly they deserve more support and encouragement than Mr. Maxon ever gave them.

Giggle Smokers

The departure the other day of Mr. Gene Krupa, the hot jive drummer, for the San Quentin (Calif.) Prison has aroused a new flurry of excitement about the drug called marijuana, of which one symptom was the series of articles by Mr. Linton Burkett published in The Post. There seems to be very little doubt that the smoking of marijuana is unhappily common among performers of jazz orchestras, especially those of the "hot" (as differentiated from the "sweet") variety. There is probably also some measure of addiction among the more psychotic patrons of such orchestras. This may or may not be what is really behind Mr. J. Caesar Petrillo's war against juke boxes and phonograph recordings, though, if it is, we wish that he would come out and say so. It wouldn't improve Mr. Petrillo's position among his own musicians, probably, but it might raise him a bit in the estimation of the general public.

Meantime, it might be as well for parents of boys and girls who are merely intermittent listeners to this sort of stuff not to become too alarmed. Although the domestic production of marijuana or hemp has certainly increased, because of its utility in the war program, there is, as far as we can learn, not much evidence that it is being used very extensively by school children. Indeed, of the numerous, and in some cases truly terrifying, problems of juvenile delinquency created by war conditions, this seems to be one of the least.

Another thing to remember is that there is nothing especially new about this marijuana habit or marijuana itself. It is merely our old friend hashish or cannabis sativa, dressed up in a new name. Thirty or forty years ago, you may remember, hashish and absinthe were staples in the diet of almost every self-respecting symbolist and decadent poet. Of course, the market for hot jive music in the 1940s is somewhat larger than was the market for symbolist or decadent poetry in the 1890s, but, after all, whose fault is that but ours who make the market?

Health Programs

WHEN MEXICO and the United States a few days ago announced the signing of a cooperative health and sanitation agreement it was not stop-press nor even front-page news. Yet that event marks realization of one of the New World's oldest and finest ambitions, a realization that will have as great an effect on millions of people in this hemisphere as any war gain headlined that day.

The Mexican agreement, the sixteenth of a series, extends a cooperative drive against one of Latin America's deadliest enemies, disease, to all continental countries except Uruguay and Argentina, nations that do not have the health problems of the tropical and mountain states.

Just how serious this problem is can be understood from their death rate, around 200 per 1000, as compared with our 11 or 12. In some tropical areas as many as 80 per cent of the population have malaria. In many places the tuberculosis death rate runs from 200 to 350 per 100,000, as compared with our 80. They have several terrible diseases virtually unknown to us.

Health Service

The American republics began the world's first international health service in 1902 when the Second Pan-American Conference created the Pan-American Sanitary Bureau. This office has been largely instrumental in cleaning up New World ports and stopping the great epidemics that use to sweep from country to country. With limited funds, it continues to do splendid advisory and supervising work.

But the health problems of Latin America are today tied in directly with manpower for the war against the Axis. When the Rio meeting was held soon after Pearl Harbor, Latin America's role as supplier of raw materials for our war factories was mapped out. At the same time, it was agreed that a cooperative health program would be pushed.

Since rubber, balsa, quinine bark and other desperately needed products come from disease-infested tropics and many ores from mountain regions where typhus and tuberculosis sap workers energies, this campaign was not only desirable from a humane point of view, but absolutely necessary for practical reasons.

About 75 per cent of the money for this unique international drive is being supplied by the United States at present, although Latin-American countries are putting in money as well as manpower and supplies. The Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs has set up an operating agency which works directly with special health departments created by each Latin-American government.

War Emergency

We have had to get these programs going in the war emergency, but the plan is to shift their support entirely to the Latin Americans in a year or two. Our technicians are being used in the proportion of about one to 25 Latin Americans, so there is no drain on our trained manpower. Training programs for hundreds of Latin-American doctors, nurses, sanitary engineers and health officers are under way. They will later on staff the programs entirely.

South America's tremendous Amazon Valley, an area larger than the continental United States, is scene of the most spectacular project. A city-wide clean-up has been carried out at the Atlantic port of Belem through which thousands upon thousands of rubber tappers are streaming toward the interior. An isolation hospital has been built there. Inland along a 2000-mile trail five main hospitals have been built and 56 dispensaries set up. On the Amazon and its tributaries are 25 floating dispensaries that carry millions of tablets of atebrine each month to isolated communities. This war on malaria has been carried all the way across South America to the sources of the Amazon in Bolivia, Peru and Colombia.

Health centers and tuberculosis hospitals have been built in Ecuador, Paraguay, Peru, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador. Leper hospitals have been put up in Colombia, Bolivia and Paraguay. Clinics to combat yaws, a highly contagious skin disease, now dot Haiti. Bubonic plague is being fought in Brazilian coast towns. The route of the Pan American Highway is being cleaned up in Central America and will be a project in Mexico.

All this will last long after the war is done and it will help Latin America overcome one of the most serious blocks to its development. Disease is one of the most stubborn chains that binds most of the area to its traditional "backwardness."

The advantages to us are many. Areas where our troops and those of our Allies are on guard have been cleaned up. Our political commitments made at the Rio conference have been lived up to and new building-stones have been cemented into the inter-American arch. And we are getting from Latin America millions of tons of urgently needed war supplies.

But as important as this, we are building a fund of good will for tomorrow that will finally overshadow all the mistakes we may have made in the past. This will seal the New World defenses against future tampering from the outside.

Strong Warning To The Italians

PRIME MINISTER Churchill, and President Roosevelt have delivered a drastic warning to the people of Italy.

"If you continue to tolerate the Fascist regime which serves the evil power of the Nazis," they are told, "you must suffer the consequences of your own choice . . . The time has come for you to decide whether Italians shall die for Mussolini and Hitler—or live for Italy and civilization."

This is not the first time such an appeal has been made to the Italians, though the present one is by all odds the most powerful as it is unquestionably the last.

The time for words is passing. If this blast of the Allied trumpet will not bring down what Vergil called "the walls of lofty Rome," bombs and bayonets will certainly do so.

This is the very last chance for the Italians to intervene in a situation which has brought them nothing but misery and which will be productive of much more misery if they remain passive.

WILL THIS APPEAL prove more successful than past appeals have been?

On December 23, 1940, Winston Churchill issued a prophetic warning to the Italians. Italy had then been at war for more than six months, a war which at the time of Italy's entry, Mussolini had not expected to last for more than six weeks.

When Churchill spoke Italy's East African empire was in process of crumbling. At the same time the large Italian force under Graziani which, in Mussolini's words, had made a "lightning-like thrust" into Egypt the previous September, was beginning to reel under the blows dealt by General Wavell's Army of the Nile.

"Our armies," said Churchill to the Italians, "are tearing and will tear your African empire to shreds and tatters. We are only at the beginning of this somber tale."

WHATEVER the Italian people may have thought about Churchill's warning, it is clear they did nothing about it. Nor did Churchill have any better luck with subsequent appeals to them to rebel against their Fascist and Nazi masters.

What resistance there has been in Italy to the war, to Mussolini, to the Fascist regime and its German wirepullers, has been passive—a sit-down strike rather than a rush to the barricades.

Fascism's professed aim was to make the Italian people into a new race of gladiators whose martial spirit would find an outlet in the creation of a second Roman Empire.

All it actually did was to intensify the age-old cynicism and fatalism of the Italians, their passivity in the face of despotism.

In the 20 years since the March on Rome so many of those capable of playing the role of a Mazzini, a Garibaldi, a Daniele Manin in this period of twentieth-century tyranny have been forced into exile, imprisoned or killed.

In the three years since they docilely allowed themselves to be led into war, a war they hated from the start, the Italians have never revealed any capacity or any readiness to rebel.

Can we expect them to rebel now?

THE ITALIAN people are, at bottom, an earthy people, endowed at one and the same time with a lively imagination and great common sense. They know that Italy is beaten. They also realize what the consequences will be to their country and to them, personally, if they do not surrender. There can be no doubt that their heads and their hearts will respond favorably to the Churchill-Roosevelt appeal.

Will they also respond with their hands? Will they this time seize power from those who have usurped it, reassert their God-given right to be masters of their own destiny, kick out Mussolini and his rotten, corrupt and incompetent gang and surrender to the Allies?

WE CAN TAKE it for granted that is precisely what the overwhelming majority of Italians would like to do. But the dominant mood of the overwhelming majority of Italians has been, and probably remains, one of utter hopelessness and helplessness.

Power remains in the fumbling and faltering hands of some 4,000,000 Fascists who alone have any reason for keeping Italy in the war.

The Fascists have proved incapable of protecting the Italian Empire. They could not prevent the bombing of Italian cities or the invasion of Sicily. They will not be able to prevent the invasion of the Italian mainland. But they may still be strong enough to cow the mass of Italians. The instruments of subjugation remain in their hands.

Unless, therefore, there is a revolt in the Italian army, which is a possibility, all that the Italians may be able to do, at this time, is to resist passively.

Italian passive resistance, which the Churchill-Roosevelt appeal will undoubtedly increase, is not to be discounted, however. Under present circumstances it will help accelerate the trend toward internal collapse in Italy. Messrs. Churchill and Roosevelt have timed their appeal well.

Reply To Lippmann

Your Mr. Walter Lippmann seems to be a little put out because Mr. Demaree Bess of the Saturday Evening Post has reported some facts about the North African situation not previously known to Mr. Lippmann.

Mr. Lippmann complains that it is not good for Mr. Bess instead of Mr. Lippmann to have the privilege of reporting these facts. One can readily understand Mr. Lippmann's distress by reading some of his recent columns, in which he professed to be privy to the facts, but which are now shown by Mr. Bess to have been based principally on ignorance of the facts.

Any journalist can be caught wrong and forgiven for it. But no journalist, particularly one enjoying the respectful tolerance accorded Mr. Lippmann, can be excused for whining, when so caught, that a rival has been favored; that he has "sung for his dinner" and that there is something discreditable in the way he came by his information.

The facts reported by Mr. Bess were readily available in North Africa, as I have personal reason to know. Mr. Bess' sin was that he did a more thorough job of collecting and correlating them than had ever been done before. If Mr. Lippmann would move out of his tower some day he might find such facts available to him, too.

But Mr. Lippmann, it can be judged from his current exercises, is very busy tuning up for some singing of his own. Having sung for Mr. Hoover and then shifted nervously to singing for Mr. Roosevelt, he is again getting the pitch to sing for almost anyone except Mr. Roosevelt. Anyone who wants to is welcome to like it.

French Leaders

General Giraud has come, and was met with a gun salute, and welcomed by Admiral Leahy. General de Gaulle was, of course, conspicuous by his absence. He was, in fact, specifically ordered not to come.

General Giraud, whose chief fame seems to be that he has been frequently taken prisoner by the Germans, and then escaped, is a great admirer of the authoritarian ideology, and of Germany's achievements in that field. That is all part of the record. And in North Africa he has kept French and Spanish republicans and liberals and Jews in jail, and he has put into power no one but French collaborationists. This has all been done with the 100 per cent backing of our State Department, which has kept out of North Africa any Americans that do not see eye to eye with the State Department and Giraud. And Giraud himself has now come to this country, and has been met with the gun salute with which one salutes legitimate representatives of a friendly nation.

In the meantime there is a man named De Gaulle, who left France in the days of the fall of France, when everyone else was surrendering, under the orders of Petain and Weygand. He is a general who actually defeated the Germans in his part of the battle, because he had had a tank unit, gotten in the face of 100 per cent sabotage from the leaders of the French army. De Gaulle is the Frenchman who dared to resist the elect, who dared to be "stubborn," who dared to think that he was "Joan of Arc"—all of which has now become a great joke, event to F. D. R. and Willkie.

De Gaulle's crime, "mistake" has been that he refused to "see both sides," to "collaborate," to be "neutral;" he was "stubborn" and kept talking about Joan of Arc, and went to fight with "Bolshevik Britain!"; and his most heinous crime has been to keep bringing up the memory and mention of the French Republic—which Petain and Giraud thought they had killed off—and which our State Department, judging by remarks I heard a member of it make not long ago, has also wished well dead—killed by a combination of military assault and world-wide slander, carried on by the tireless Axis propaganda machine, and some of our own Government officials.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey In Syracuse

Dear Mom—

Well, we got Syracuse not to mention a lot of other places I didn't even know we was after, and by the time you get this we may have took Utica, Schenectady and Wappingers Falls. Before we get through with that big bag of wind Mussolini he will not even have O Solo Mia left. You could have knocked me over with a dehydrated stringbean when I found we had captured Syracuse and I gess maybe this is a gag. I know very well where Syracuse is.

* * * *

Sergeant Mooney says we are giving American names to Italian cities already and that when we take Naples it will be given out as Chicago and that Venice is listed now as either Binghamton, Cincinnati or Sioux City, he ain't sure which. I found out it was a gag about Syracuse when I entered the place and said to a Sicilian "Okay, if this is Syracuse name me a great theatrical family what come from there." They had never even heard of the Shuberts, Jake, and Lee.

* * * *

I serpose you know the other places we took. Pozzallo, Puzzullu, Schnozzola, Rosolini, Puccini, Tettrazzini, Minnestrone and Chilly-Chilly-Bean. But I still aint had a good Italian table de hotes dinner for 75 cents with a bottle of red ink thrown in.

Right after we landed I asked for meatballs and spigrette but Sergeant Mooney said to have patience on account of when we had meatballs and spigrettee we wood have Mussolini cook and serve it for us.

* * * *

Well, mom, it sure seems funny to see a Yankee army taking places like Sicily, which most jeeps could not of even located six months ago. I knew they got olive oil and opera singers from Sicily but I never dreamed I would be chasing people thru its main streets and olive groves with a bayonet.

* * * *

I gess we must be collecting islands. A couple of years ago you couldn't of gave us even a peninsula over here, with a new suit of clothes thrown in. I told the sergeant I did not care for islands but wood like a souvenir so he told me to shut up and I could have Mount Etna. I do not know what Mount Etna is but he says it is hot suff.

This island of Sicily looks on the map like a football at the toe of Italy which looks like a boot. With Sicily in our hands Mussolini can't punt or try for a drop kick.

* * * *

Well, this is just a quickie to let you know how things stand. I am well and expect to be in Naples any day. Sergeant Mooney says he has fixed it up for me to have a lunch in the Crater of Vesuvius which must be a native restaurant or something.

Well, this will have to be all for now, mom, with all my love.

Safe Landings

A few months ago, the New Yorker ran a series of articles about Maj. Philip Cochran of the Army Air Forces in Africa, the real-life prototype of Maj. Flip Corkin of your "Terry and the Pirates" strip. The articles included an account of how Major Cochran guided a lost airplane pilot to an airfield, in darkness and under a low ceiling. A safe landing followed.

Too bad someone like Major Cochran wasn't on hand in Washington the other night to perhaps have a searchlight directed toward a landing field or at least used to guide those lost pilots out of a populated section. Instead they were permitted to circle for about 10 minutes over a thickly populated area and, finally, crash in such an area.

American Customs

I note that World War Veteran does not like the idea of our soldiers and sailors strolling about the streets of Washington while holding hands with their best girls. He even thinks that our Allies think it unseemly.

As one who has observed conditions in five foreign capitals—three of them during the last war—I, for one, don't agree with him. These boys, mostly, if not all, have just come from active war areas, or they are just about to return to such, and it seems unfair to begrudge them the few hours of wholesome and affectionate friendship that comes their way. In no other foreign capital are general conditions so wholesome and the tone of public decency so spontaneous and so well maintained.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

And Then

PAINFUL THOUGH it is to the men affected and to their many friends, the President's action in removing Mr. Wallace and Mr. Jones from the posts in which they have quarreled was absolutely necessary. Government cannot be carried on without discipline, and sometime somewhere discipline had to be imposed upon the members of the President's own official family.

LIPPMANN

THE NEW arrangement is obviously better than the one it supersedes. For it places in one office, rather than in two rival offices, the operations under the general head of what the executive order calls, perhaps too broadly, "foreign economic affairs." In fact, Mr. Crowley will, it appears, be the operating head for the control of imports and exports in wartime.

The policy under which he will operate will be determined, it would seem, by the War Production Board, which will tell him what to import and what he may export,—and by the Department of State, which will tell him to whom to export and how he shall deal with foreign countries with which we do wartime business.

This is correctly conceived in that the lines of authority run clearly to the right places. The War Production Board knows what we need to import and what we can spare for export. The Department of State ought, as a matter of course, to regulate all contact with foreign countries, and to have the final say in all foreign relations.

SO FAR, then, so good. But that this is only a beginning, and by no means the end, of the indispensable reform can be seen quite clearly in the letter which the President has addressed to the heads of all departments and agencies. They may not quarrel in public on penalty of immediate dismissal from office. But what do they do with their disputes which are inevitable in the best regulated government, and with their conflicts of view which may at times be the only way of developing the whole truth out of many half-truths?

They must submit their differences to the President, or to his deputy, Mr. Byrnes. There, sharply defined, is the crux of the trouble, the basic error in Mr. Roosevelt's philosophy of administration. He regards his chief lieutenants as separate little sovereigns responsible to him but not to one another. He will never conduct the Government well until he makes his principal officers collectively responsible with himself in the determination of policy. This is what it means to have a Cabinet. When there is a Cabinet, the President does not sit as judge and arbitrator over rival chieftains. The chieftains themselves, with the President presiding and leading them, are compelled to settle their disputes in the presence of their colleagues and to abide by the decision of their colleagues. That is the only way to achieve full "coordination"—that is by having the decisions made by those who have to be coordinated.

THAT IS the only way of putting an end to the deplorable practice of private and separate and ex parte appeals to a President who cannot possibly find the time or the knowledge to understand the whole issue. Then it would not be necessary for the President to confess, as he does in his letter to Messrs. Wallace and Jones, that he does not know the rights and wrongs of their 18-month-old dispute. In a Cabinet their disputes would have been determined before they arose, or as they arose, and would have been settled by the judgment of their peers.

The alternatives, therefore, are clear. On the one hand, there is the President's practice of being the judge among rival chieftains. This puts a premium on rivalry for his favor, rivalry in stimulating public pressure, rivalry for personal and departmental prestige. On the other hand, there is Cabinet government of the American type as carried on by the elder Roosevelt and by Wilson in their best days: here the chieftains are a team; as a team they impose teamwork on one another, and they learn to realize that they stand or fall together.

THIS MAKES not only for administrative efficiency but for political wisdom. Even worse than the public bickering, bad as it is, is the fact that to a very disturbing degree decisions of the highest consequence are made impromtu, without the benefit of thorough discussion, and on the basis of the personal feelings of the President and of someone, whoever it happens to be, that he listens to on that subject.

The alarming state into which our foreign relations have drifted is a spectacular example of what infinite damage can be done when great policies are conducted in anger and by individual impulse rather than by a council deliberating carefully. The difference between Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt is, in this respect, striking. For while Mr. Churchill also has strong feelings and sharp impluses, as all big men have, the wise restraints of the British tradition of cabinet government are there to control and shape the policy of the government. But in Washington momentous policies are determined without such restraint, and not only the President's whims are law.

Yet no man is wise enough to make great decisions, which affect our relations with all the nations of the world, alone and unchecked by the chief officials responsible for the war, alone and incited and excited by two or three men full of prejudice and phobia. In this way the President's French policy, which is implicating his whole foreign policy, has gotten to a pass where it defies all common sense.

All will not be well, and we shall incur enormous and unwarranted risks until Mr. Roosevelt faces the truth, which is the beginning of political wisdom, that it is in the consultations of a cabinet, only in the practice of consultation and deliberation, that common sense is most likely to be brought to bear on great issues.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 16.—Because of the rise of juvenile sex delinquency in wartime, some civic authorities believe attempts should be made through the schools and through the newspapers to provide a sounder and more objective education of the public on sex matters.

They argue that a frank and open approach to such problems would give young people intelligent guidance which parents often fail to provide. Opponents of this point of view argue, on the other hand, that public discussion of such subjects may bring more harm than good to the younger generation.

The idea of instituting courses in sex education in American high schools meets with considerable public favor, as reported by the Institute last month. There is less support, however, for the proposal that daily newspapers should carry columns by medical authorities frankly and scientifically discussing sex matters.

A survey was conducted throughout the 48 States by the Institute on the following issue:

"Some people say that sex problems should be scientifically and frankly discussed by medical authorities in daily newspapers. Do you approve or disapprove of this?"

The vote is:

Approve	40%
Disapprove	44
Undecided	16

The chief reason given by those who disapprove of the idea is that there would be no way to prevent very young children from reading such articles if they appeared in the newspapers.

Notable differences in attitude were found by age groups and by men and women. Women in general disapprove of the idea of newspaper columns discussing sex problems, while men approve.

The young age groups—those between 21 and 29—favor the idea, while the older groups oppose it.

There is also a marked difference according to degree of education. Following is the vote of various groups:

	Approve	Disapprove	Undec.
Men	43%	38%	19%
Women	38	49	13
Aged 21-29	49	38	13
30-49	41	43	16
50 & over	35	48	17
College Trained	51	41	8
High School Only	45	44	11
Grade School Only	35	44	21

Showdown On Peace

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Hatch Wants Action

Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico served notice yesterday the bipartisan four authors of the Ball postwar resolution will ask a clear-cut Senate vote on the five specific points in their proposed peace commitment.

Hatch, one of the four, said he believes it is essential the Senate go on record on each of the strong five points, regardless of whether the House passes the more general Fulbright "lasting peace" declaration.

Danger in Weakness

"The danger in passing a weak and meaningless resolution is that such action would in no sense strengthen our position with other nations either now or at the peace conference," the New Mexico Democrat said.

"On the contrary, such a resolution would likely cause our present Allies to believe America would return after the war to an isolationist policy. They would therefore begin making their plans now, without considering us as a potent factor in world affairs after the war ended."

Appeal to Nation

Hatch and his three colleagues have taken their appeal for specific commitments on a Nationwide stump, teaming with House speakers. Senator Joseph H. Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, will conclude a tour through the West late this month in the Dakotas. Hatch, who has been ill, will start his own stumping at the same time in Iowa. Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican) of Ohio, after a series of speeches through the Midwest will go into New England next month. Senator Lister Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, fourth sponsor of the resolution, later will join the "public education" campaign.

General Commitments

Hatch said it will not be necessary to offer amendments in the Senate if the essential "B-2 H-2" points are accepted by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which has slated action in the fall. Committee leaders, however, have indicated the committee leans toward general, rather than specific peace commitments.

"My candid judgment is," said Hatch, "the Foreign Relations Committee will report a resolution which will have more strength and vitality than the Fulbright (House) resolution, even if our own points are not included.

Military Force Asked

Hatch said there certainly could be no room for controversy on Point 1 of the resolution, which calls for full utilization of military and economic resources of all member nations in prosecuting the war.

Point 3, proposing a United Nations organization to administer relief and rehabilitation, Hatch said, already has been substantially embodied in the draft agreement recently announced by the State Department.

Other points ask temporary administrations for Axis-controlled areas as they are occupied by United Nations forces, procedures and machinery for peaceful settlement of disputes between nations, and maintenance of a United Nations military force to suppress immediately any future attempt at military aggression.

Chairman Sol Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday issued a vigorous denial that the Ball-Burton-Hill-Hatch resolution was "stronger" than the House declaration. Bloom argued that generalized language would permit postwar dealing with many contingencies that could not be seen in advance, while specified commitments "would tie our hands much as they were tied by the Neutrality Act."

How Marines Slogged Through Jungle To Knock Off Jap Post

By Tom Yarbrough

Associated Press Staff Writer

South Pacific Headquarters, July 16.—United States Marines and Army soldiers who slogged through the sodden New Georgia Island jungle for five almost incredibly difficult days from Rice Anchorage to Enogai Point endured plain torture in finishing their assigned job of wiping out a well-entrenched Japanese position.

Dramatic details of their achievement were related here today by the three members of a marine movie camera crew who stayed with their comrades every step of the way and got pictures all along in spite of the worst the Japanese and the jungle could throw in their way.

The principal narrator was Technical Sergt. Edward Adolphe, 33, of New York City, former copyreader on the New York Herald Tribune, free-lance writer and radio drama director. His teammates were Staff Sergt. Heber Maxwell, 21, Mountain City, Tenn., and Pvt. First Class James Poole, 24, of Baltimore.

Adolph said:

"Plain Torture"

"The air distatnce from our landing point to our objective was 2½ or 3 miles but, through the jungle, we had to travel 13 miles . . . sometimes up to our necks in mire . . . We used up our 'last energy' several times . . . it was plain torture . . .

"If you couldn't keep going, there was no one to help you and you dropped out and rested a while . . . We were awakened one morning by a burst of gunfire from Japanese in trees above us—they'd crept up without a sound in the night . . . The Japanese don't surrender, but they are not better in the jungle than we . . .

"After we took Enogai on the sixth day we caught hell from the air for three days in succession, with practically no sleep. Our wounded were wonderful. They took a beating but I never heard a single squawk . . . Enogai is located on Dragons Peninsula. I like that name."

Was 4F in Draft

Adolph had a 4F rating before he joined the Marines.

Neither he nor Maxwell were considered cameramen before they started this job, but they made test shots en route and headquarters found them satisfactory. Maxwell used to be a jeep driver. If their film survived the elements some pictures may be released.

Adolph said:

"The fireworks started at midnight July 4 in Kula Gulf when we let go at land batteries in Rice Anchorage. Guided by flares, these batteries shelled us throughout the landing and we were very scared.

"From the blackest hole I've ever seen, right in the jungle, we started the big march about 6 a. m. July 5, going single file in a very long line. The Japanese said it couldn't be done, but we did it. Went right through marshy jungle and swamp—even the sides of the hills were swampy.

"The morning of July 6 we still were in pretty good spirits, but then the going really got tough. We started throwing our gear off. We got rid of our waterlogged blankets, flashlights, cigarette lighters and even our extra knives. By the night of the sixth, we had only one day's emergency rations left.

Foot Trouble First

"It rained like hell. Foot trouble came first. Feet swelled and big water blisters came up.

"We went single file all the way. Sometimes we forded streams on logs, sometimes we were pulling ourselves through tangled undergrowth by our hands.

"It was plain torture. By the night of the seventh we were carrying nothing but our guns, ammunition and essential gear. We had eaten our last rations. There was water all around, but none to drink. The medical officers wouldn't let us.

"The late afternoon of the 7th, we hit the first Japanese outpost—just a small watch station—and it was eliminated quickly.

"The night of the 7th, we wiped out a bigger Japanese post and captured some wormy rice and biscuits.

"The morning of the 8th there was a sudden burst from snipers in the trees above us. They caused some casualties, but our men got rid of them, by spraying the foliage with machine guns. We went on in the muddy jungle and, feeling the lack of food, dug in to let the others catch up with us.

Had "Some" Casualties

"Midday on the 9th, we reached the Japanese defenses at Enogai. There the enemy was well dug in and held out until the afternoon of the 10th. Our mortars got them, however—broke their morale. Our planes were over two days before and we used the bomb craters in the coral for our mortar positions.

"We had some casualties including very few dead. The Japanese had many more. Their last two positions centered on as many machine gun nests. Our grenades got one, but the other kept going all night and our hospital corps men went in under direct fire to administer first aid to our wounded.

"We got into a Japanese supply shack and got some dry clothes and good rice and salmon and four or five bottles of saki which helped out the evening considerably.

"The Japs had a lot of sweet-smelling lotions and a surprisingly large amount of pornographic stuff.

"We captured four good 5½-inch naval guns.

"The next three days we caught hell from the air—a lot of anti-personnel daisy cutters that went off when they hit the trees. A single plane or two dropped bombs every now and then through the night just to keep us awake. That was tough on our wounded, but I never heard a single squawk."

War in Aegean May Break Any Minute, Turks Believe

By Frank O'Brien

Associated Press Staff Writer

Izmir, Turkey, July 14 (Delayed). Residents of this second largest Turkish city are keeping a weather eye turned seaward where, a few miles off their long, deep harbor, lies Chios, one of the Axis-occupied Aegean Islands.

With the Allied invasion of Sicily apparently going forward without a hitch, rumor here says the coming weekend may be critical for the Dodecanese and Greek Aegean Islands.

Automobile owners in Izmir have not received their gasoline rations for two days, possibly indicating that the Turks have decided to economize on existing stocks because they are afraid a campaign in the Aegean would cut them off from Syrian supplies.

It is persistently rumored here that the Izmir-Istanbul mail boat, which usually makes two round-trips weekly, will not sail for the next few days due to danger in the Aegean.

What these rumors and indications add up to is uncertain, for the Allied command is keeping its plans to itself, but there is a definite air of expectancy here which, of course, may have no foundation.

The Aegean Islands, including the Dodecanese, are a long archipelago stringing out from near Salonika to Crete, and form a barrier which must be broken down before an invasion of Greece could be undertaken.

The southern islands are under Italian command and largely garrisoned with Italian troops. Lately, troopships have left Salonika with between 9000 and 10,000 German coast guards, artillerymen and signal corps troops intended to stiffen the Italian defense.

The Elk Hills Oil Contract

Standard Oil's View

Denying that the Standard Oil Co. of California got a better deal than the Government on the contract for development of the Elk Hills oil field, President H. D. Collier said yesterday the contract "was like giving the Navy a blank check on our privately owned resources, and to some extent on the very future of our company."

Collier's statement said the contract, declared illegal by the Justice Department and later voided, was entered into under a threat that the Government would condemn his company's Elk Hills holdings.

Standard Oil now is engaged "in conversations with the Navy looking to a new contract that may suit the critics," he declared, but will resist any effort to condemn its holdings "if it comes to that."

Both Own Big Tracts

The Government and Standard of California both own large land tracts in the California field.

"Unfortunately the contract has been publicly misrepresented, either deliberately or through an inadequate understanding of its terms," Collier said. "I am quite willing to agree that the contract was not all that could have been desired from our company's point of view, but ironically enough the attack made upon it was based on the premise that it was.

"We considered it a very costly sacrifice on our part, for it not only restrained our use of our own oil lands during the war, but after the war period would, at the Navy's discretion, actually close down our wells indefinitely.

"At the same time the contract would compel us to stand ready at any moment, even though it might be 50 years from now, to reopen the field and produce and handle the oil upon the Navy's order.

Little to Choose From

"But we had little to choose from. In the first place we appreciated the Navy's position as being devoted to the over-all protection of the American people's interests, and particularly in time of war. The national interest was a prime consideration, we recognized that fact, and of course we were eager to cooperate with the Navy as we had in the past.

"Secondly, there was always the threat of condemnation hanging over our head.

"Of course we would be forced to resist condemnation, if it came to that, but we would not want to be put in the position of obstructing any important governmental program—certainly not in wartime."

Standard of California now is producing oil in the Elk Hills field under an interim arrangement entered into after the old contract was declared illegal and during the efforts to negotiate a new contract.

Nathan Back; Buck-Private Economsit Now

Robert R. Nathan, who waived his draft deferment as top WPB economist last March to join the Army, is back in Washington, still practicing economics, but as a buck private assigned to the Office of Strategic Services, it was learned yesterday.

The 34-year-old 6-footer, whom WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson regarded as one of his best thinkers, was rejected for combat duty following his induction April 28 because of an old back injury, it was said.

At the Office of Strategic Service, Nathan is said to be serving as an analyst of enemy economics, a post suited to his varied business background which won him the designation as one of America's "Ten Outstanding Young Men" in 1940 by the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce publication, Future.

Nathan's station here was said to be temporary, although he was expected to continue work in foreign economics.

At the time he was inducted, Nathan was chairman of WPB's planning committee and a moving figure behind many of that agency's important war programs. Although his decision to join the armed forces was based on several reasons, the prime one was believed to have been congressional suspicion of deferments granted to unmarried men in Government employ, regardless of the nature of their work.

Gift of Coffee From Brazil For Armed Forces

President Vargas of Brazil has donated 400,000 sacks of coffee for use of American armed forces on the battlefronts.

President Roosevelt said yesterday that Dr. Joaquim Pedro Salgado, Brazilian Air Minister, had brought him a letter conveying Brazil's best wishes and friendship and offering the coffee for the "soldiers of your country."

Twelve Brazilian newspapermen were guests at the President's press-radio conference. When his attention was called to their presence, Mr. Roosevelt suggested that the assemblage accord a tribute through them to the President and people of Brazil. He then led in applause for the visitors.

A Step Into The Future

By John Steinbeck

Gunner Would Help Rebuild World

London.—Sergt. Henry M. Crain came back to London with me from his base in England. In the morning he had bombed Wilhelmshaven. At noon he was back and at 4 o'clock he had a two-day pass and we went up to London together.

He was 41 and not many months ago he was a newspaper man and author. Now he was in the ball turret of a Flying Fortress, overage for the job but every faculty tested to the necessary standard which is usually attained at 25 and lost not many years afterward. Again and again he had been offered ground jobs and instructing jobs. It had needed dogged planning to get into a Fortress at his age and he refused to leave it. There was no one else in his crew over 24. They called Henry Crain "Pop" and he must have seemed ancient to them. He held their money for them and talked to them of their futures and their girls. They wondered how one so old could have got in.

Boasts of Crew

In the evening in London we talked or, rather, he talked. He told how it was flying and how he had felt when he shot down a German plane a few days before. He talked about his crew with a curious kind of manly love. They were the best, he said; the best it is possible to find, and all different, too. He knew what the chances were and what the war was about. And he tried to define himself not so much for me as for himself. He said: "I was one of those who knew the war was necessary and I worked to get us into it. I must do something about it, something close to it. This is my war." And then he switched suddenly, although the switch was not very far, and he spoke of his wife and how it had been with them. It had been deep and sweet and quiet and permanent. In some way this good marriage made it necessary for him to be in the ball turret. He was sure that was understandable.

"We Have a Chance"

And then he said: "We have a chance now. Of course, we always had a chance, but out of this upheaval we have a chance to build something better. You can't rebuild blasted structures," he said. "We should know more about building now. Maybe we'll put something light and beautiful on the place where only the cellar remains." And he asked anxiously: "You don't think we'd try to put up the old dark tenement, do you?"

His part of the war was a step into the future, and he felt that he was a kind of transition machinery—to be used by his people to step from one kind of life to another.

He thought the British were ahead of us in some ways. And he thought we should learn what they have learned: "They tell their soldiers what the war is about," he said. "They tell a man what his army job is designed to accomplish and the soldier knows he is fighting for something at home that is to come. Not vague, general words, but a tangible way of life in terms of food and comfort and security and rest. We should do that," Sergeant Crain said.

Visit Fleet Street

The next day we walked in London to the places we knew from books—Fleet Street, where newspapers were born and the house where Dr. Johnson fulminated and the apartment where Maeaulay wrote his history. We went to the temple where law was made and to the round church the Norman knights built nearly a thousand years ago and left to go to the Crusades. Crane loved the city with its continuing ghosts. You talk of old things intimately where they happened—as though they were still happening.

The temple was blasted and fire-blackened. The city was destroyed as all cities are again and again. But he could see the rising new city here, just as he could at home. He was as certain that the better thing would come as he was that the old thing had been. And above all he was clear. He knew what he was and what he wanted and he knew how to go about it. There was nothing confused in him.

Sunday night he went back to his station, to his ball turret, to his two .50-caliber machine guns, his implements into the future. Sergeant Crain and his crew were lost over enemy territory. The report says—"Some parachutes were seen to open."

Patton Told Men to Attack Sicily 'Viciously, Without Rest'

By Alexander Clifford

Representing the Combined British Press Distributed by the Associated Press

American Seventh Army Headquarters, Zero Hour (Delayed).—Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, jr., commander of the Seventh Army, told his men in an order of the day just before they hit Sicily's beaches to attack "rapidly, ruthlessly, viciously, without rest."

It concluded:

"Keep punching. God is with us. We shall win."

When we came aboard we knew almost nothing. Of course we made guesses and discussed theories. Not until we were well out at sea—the centerpiecer in a proud convoy with a screen of American warships all around us—did the secret begin to emerge.

There was the issue of Italian phrase books. That narrowed down the choice. For a day all over the ship you could hear people running through Italian verbs, pronouncing them with broad, honest American vowel sounds which I swear no Sicilian would ever understand.

Then Lieutenant General Patton wrote his secret order of the day and a colonel climbed a gun turret to read what he had written.

Lauds British

"We are indeed honored in having been selected by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the American component of this new and greater attack against the Axis," the order said.

"We are teamed with the justly famous British Eighth Army which attacks on our right and we have for the army group commander that veteran and distinguished soldier, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander.

"When we land we will meet German and Italian soldiers whom it is our honor and privilege to attack and destroy.

"Many of you have in your veins German and Italian blood but remember that these ancestors of yours so loved freedom that they gave up home and country to cross the ocean in search of liberty. The ancestors of the people we shall kill lacked the courage to make such a sacrifice and continued as slaves."

The order concluded:

"Remember that we as attackers have the initiative. We must retain this tremendous advantage by always attacking, rapidly, ruthlessly, viciously, without rest. However tired and hungry you may be the enemy will be more tired, more hungry. Keep punching. God is with us. We shall win."

Then we definitely were told what most of us already had suspected—it was Sicily.

In a curious way our spirits rose abruptly as soon as we knew our destination for certain.

There was spaghetti for lunch that day and it led to a good deal of rather obvious joking. The same afternoon maps, plans and aerial photographs were issued and we began studying the thing in earnest.

We became familiar with the geography of Gela, the large village which was the center point of the American bridgehead area.

We memorized the positions of the airfields of Comiso, Biscari, Licata and Porto Olivo.

We saw how the Americans' plan was integrated with plans of the Eighth Army and airborne troops.

We came to realize the fantastic size of this expedition. We had had hints already as we zigzagged our way along devious course through the Mediterranean. Again and again we kept bumping into other British or American convoys.

One evening we had three in sight, all bigger than ourselves. They seemed to form a frieze around the entire horizon with barrage balloons floating like black or silver specks in the sky above.

The decks and cabins were swarming with generals and colonels.

There was a famous Hollywood film star aboard and also a former Governor of New York and a renowned baseball player.

(These were not named in the dispatch.)

Few British Aboard

There were just about a half dozen British officers engaged in intelligence liaison jobs.

There's General Patton himself—57 years old, typically American in appearance, with gray hair, a bald patch, and wrinkles at the corners of his eyes.

He was very genuinely anxious to avoid personal publicity and won't allow himself to be quoted because he doesn't believe generals should be quoted.

Now his men are going ashore and he is standing on the bridge peering after them in the darkness. It is a big and anxious moment for General Patton.

Hedrick Is Named Air Judge Advocate

The War Department announced yesterday the appointment of Brig. Gen. Lawrence H. Hedrick of Washington, D. C., as air judge advocate, Army Air Forces.

Hedrick returned recently from Britain, where has was judge advocate general of Army forces in the European theater.

Battlefield Reaction Told By Chaplain

Fragments of Scripture, remembered by one soldier as he heard another recite them during the heat of battle on Guadalcanal, led a typical soldier to study the Bible earnestly, according to a report to the War Department by Chaplain (First Lieut.) Gary A. Bousman of Richmond, who has returned to the United States recently from four months' service on Guadalcanal and Tulagi.

After the battle, the fighting man came to the chaplain, repeated what he remembered, and said he wanted to learn the whole of the passage. Chaplain Bousman listened. The phrases were from the Twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd."

The last time Chaplain Bousman saw the soldier, he was reading a Bible presented to him by the chaplain.

"After battle, men talk quite freely about religion and their personal problems," Chaplain Bousman said. "They see their buddies killed. They lay in the fox holes and look at the stars and think pretty seriously. As much as I've studied theology, I too, have given it more serious thought after battle. It makes you think."

Soldiers at the front want a chaplain to be with them. Chaplain Bousman said they appreciate his bringing cigarettes to them in the fox holes when theirs are gone, his companionship, and encouragement. He cheers the wounded, and buries the dead.

American U. Names Potorf Religion Dean

Dr. A. B. Potorf, William Fraser McDowell professor of religion of the College of Arts and Sciences, has been appointed dean of religion of the American University, it was announced yesterday, by Dr. Harry W. Burgan, chairman of the board of trustees.

POTORF

As part of his duties in the field of religion, Dean Potorf will have general supervision of the student personnel council which directs the conseling and guidance programs of the students.

Dean Potorf came to the American University in 1936 after serving 11 years as professor of religion in Hamline University. He was graduated from West Virginia University magna cum laude and took his bachelor's, master's and doctor's degrees in theology from Drew University.

Rev. N. C. Acton Preaches Tomorrow

The Rev. Nathaniel C. Acton, vicar of St. Andrew's Chapel, College Park, Md., and chairman of the Committee on College Work of the Department of Religious Education, Washington Diocese, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish.

Church Increases Staff

Miss May Haslacker, who was graduated from the Baptist Institute in Philadelphia this spring, had been added to the staff of Calvary Baptist Church as assistant director of young people's work

To Sing at First Baptist

A mixed quartet composed of Lona Roberts, Robert Morris, Josephine Dibella and Jack Newman will sing tomorrow at 8 p. m. at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest.

Summer Club Picnic

The young adults' summer club of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church will hold a picnic Thursday night at the Palisades Playground, and the Fireside group will have an outing July 24 at Hains Point.

Life Ambition

Evangelist Seeks to Aid Racial Unity

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Andrew Tillman, young Negro truck driver—evangelist here, has one big goal in life:

To foster unity and understanding between the white and Negro races.

TILLMAN

"For until we learn to trust each other," he said yesterday, "we will always find ourselves traveling uneven paths of life, because where there is unity there is strength. In order to win this temporal war, we must fight together in this spiritual war against the prince of this world—the devil."

Tillman has a radio program on WWDC Fridays from 10:30 to 11 p. m., speaking from the St. Luke Baptist Church, 85 R Street Northwest.

Tillman is stressing better race relations in many of his radio talks, and also in the chats with white and Negro workmen with whom he mingles in his daily labors. He is employed by William Montague, a trucking operator who has hauling contracts with the Federal Works Agency.

Tillman, whose late father was a Methodist minister in North Carolina, lives at 1836 Stanton Terrace with his wife and four children. He is a lay preacher at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2401 Ainger Place Southeast, and is a licensed evangelist.

Christian Science Topic to Be 'Life'

The Christian Science lesson-sermon for tomorrow is "Life." Services are held in all churches and societies at 11 a. m. and repeated at 8 p. m., except Third Church, at 5 p. m. All are invited to attend the services and the Wednesday evening meeting, at 8 o'clock

Among the citations comprising the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And as for me, Thou upholdest me in mine integrity, and settest me before Thy face forever." (Psalms 41:12).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Life is without beginning and without end. Eternity, not time, expresses the thought of Life, and time is no part of eternity," (Page 468).

Mrs. Paine to Be Baha'i Speaker

Mrs. Mabel Paine of Urbana, Ill., graduate of Wellesley College, will speak tomorrow at 8:15 p. m. at the Baha'i Hall, 1300 I Street Northwest.

Mrs. Paine has taught English at Simmons College, Boston, Mass., and other places. She and her daughter, Mrs. R. C. Parmelee of Washington, D. C., visited Palestine in 1920, where they were guests in the household of Abdu'l-Baha, the interpreter of the Baha'i faith, and of its founder, Baha U'llah.

In 1931 they again visited the international headquarters of the Baha'i faith at Haifa, Palestine, and Shoghi Effendi, its guardian.

Chaplain to Preach

Chaplain Paul W. Yinger, minister of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell Street Northwest, now on military leave, will return to his pastorate tomorrow to conduct the service and preach the sermon. Chaplain Yinger is now stationed at Westover Field, Mass.

Bishop Hughes To Speak Here Tomorrow

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, former senior bishop of the Methodist Church and head of the Washington area, who last week told Chicagoans that Washington was setting a pace for the Nation in consumption of alcoholic beverage, will speak here tomorrow.

He will be heard at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. services of Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, and at Mount Rainier community vespers at 6:30 p. m. at Mount Rainier Methodist Church.

HUGHES

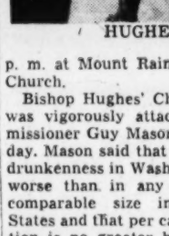
Bishop Hughes' Chicago address was vigorously attacked by Commissioner Guy Mason last Wednesday. Mason said that "drinking and drunkenness in Washington" are no worse than in any other city of comparable size in the United States and that per capita consumption is no greater here than elsewhere.

Mason pointed out that liquor sales in the District reflect purchases of the entire metropolitan area, since suburbanites buy here.

Bishop Hughes was resident bishop from 1932 to 1940, and was recently elected to sever temporarily as resident bishop, succeeding Bishop Adna Leonard, who died in a plane crash in Iceland, May 3.

Lutherans to Hear Dr. Rasmussen at Service Tomorrow

Worshipers of Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, tomorrow at 11 a. m., will welcome back a former pastor, Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, as guest preacher.



RASMUSSEN

Dr. Rasmussen was minister from 1929 to 1940, when he accepted a call to the chair of systematic theology at Gettysburg Lutheran Seminary. His theme will be "A Galilean Peasant Among the World's Gods."

Dr. Henry Einsbruch, missionary to the Salem Hebrew Mission in Baltimore and who has translated and published the New Testament in the Yiddish language, will address the Luther League tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. The Red Cross will meet Wednesday from 10:30 to 4 p. m., and the Gleaners and Crusaders Thursday at 8 p. m.

Open-Air Religious Services Scheduled Here Tomorrow

Churches Uniting For Summer Programs On Lawns and Parks

Midsummer religious services on church lawns and in parks, including several community-wide programs, are expected to draw many worshipers tomorrow afternoon and evening.

Dr. J. Hillman Hollister, pastor of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, will address union vespers at 7:30 p. m. on the lawn of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

Takoma Park interdenominational services will take place at 7 p. m. on the lawn at No. 8 Columbia Avenue, with the Rev. F. H. Yost of the Adventist faith, preaching. Wilfred H. Smith, director of Emory Methodist choirs, will be song leader and guest soloist, accompanied by Miss Shirley Russell. A. Y. Acher of Takoma Park Baptist Church, will preside, and Frank Harris of the Lutheran faith, will offer prayers.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Washington Methodist resident bishop, will address community vespers of Mount Rainier congregation tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at Mount Rainier Methodist Church.

The Rev. Daniel W. Justice, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, will speak at Lincoln Park services at 4 p. m, this particular program sponsored by the three adult Bible classes of Trinity Church. A male quartet will sing.

The Washington Laymen's Evangelistic Association, headed by William Bond, jr., is sponsoring tent meetings at Thirteenth and K Streets Southeast, with the Rev. H. W. Lucas, Lexington (Ky.) evangelist, as current speaker.

DR. HOLLISTER

He will address a servicemen's rally tonight at 7:45 and other services tomorrow at 3 p. m. and 7:45 p. m., and then daily at 7:45 p. m.

Bunking Pastor Locates Home

The Rev. George Yount, assistant pastor of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, who had to bivouac in his study Wednesday night because of the housing shortage, has found living quarters at last, he reported yesterday.

After an exhaustive search, he has secured a place in the 2300 block of California Street Northwest, he said.

The Rev. Mr. Yount had just returned from a vacation, and found that the house where he had maintained quarters had been sold. He was obliged to search for a new place but was unable to locate one close to his church.

So, the Rev. Mr. Yount, a young bachelor, moved his trunk, books and other personal effect to the parish hall basement. He put a cot in his study at the church and went to sleep there.

Missionaries At National City

The Rev. and Mrs. J. Raymond Mills, missionaries to Paraguay, will occupy the pulpit of the National City Christian Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. The Millses have done outstanding work in the field of educational missions and the congregation. Mr. Mills served as associate minister of the National City Christian Church for several years before going to South America in 1935.

Joseph Boes, widely known tenor soloist, will song Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer" in this service. The Rev. Benton Roy Hanan, associate minister of the church, will preside over the meeting in the absence of Dr. J. Warren Hastings, who will be speaking in Springfield, Ill. The service begins at 10:50 a. m. and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Vacation Bible School

Central Presbyterian Church, Fifteenth and Irving Streets Northwest, is sponsoring a daily vacation Bible school for children from 4 to 16 years old.

Catholics Plan Ancient Rites At Shrine Here

As a part of a Nation-wide devotion to the Blessed Mother, which will be observed in most metropolitan centers, a solemn high mass will be celebrated in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University tomorrow at 11 a. m. The occasion is the annual observance in honor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, in which the lay and religious students in attendance at the summer session of the university, and members of the neighboring religious orders will participate.

Proceded by a procession, which will form at 10:30 o'clock at McMahon Hall, the marchers will follow a statue of Our Lady of Mount Carmel borne aloft by a Dominican, a Franciscan, an Augustinian and a Crmelite priest. During the march to the shrine the participants wil recite the rosary and chant hymns of praise to the Blessed Mother.

The mass will be acording to the ancient rite of the Holy Sepulcher, with the Very Rev. George Klasinski, O. Carm., prior of White Frairs Hall, as celebrant. The Rev. Malachy Smith, O. Carm., will serve as deacon and the Rev. Alphonsus Croake, O. Carm., will be subdeacon. The preacher will be the Rev. Dr. James A. Magner, procurator of Catholic University. The choir will be composed of seminarians of White Frairs Hall, with congregational singing by the worshipers. Following the mass those who desire will be enrolled in the scapular of Our Lady of Mount Carmel.

Church to Resume French Services

French services at St. John's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth and H Streets Northwest, will be revived the first Sunday in October under the direction of the Rev. Dr. Florian Vurpillot. Services were discontinued when the Rev. Andre F Liotard, formerly director, left Washington to join the French army. Upon their resumption in the fall, Dr. Georges Barrois of Princeton University will assist Dr. Vurpillot.

At Temple Baptist

'Song at 70' To Be Topic Of Sermon

Dr. John E. Briggs, who was pastor of Fifth Baptist Church here for 33 years until his retirement May 31, will celebrate his "three score and 10" tomorrow by guest preaching at Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N Streets Northwest.

BRIGGS

His subject at 11 a. m. will be "My Song at 70," and at 8 p. m. on "The Second Greatest and Best Thing in the World."

Temple worshipers will tender a reception to Dr. Briggs after the evening service The All-Girl Choir will sing at both services.

Former Texas Representative Clyde Garrett will teach the adult class tomorrow at 9:30 a. m.

Captain Moore To Fill Pulpit for Pastor Tomorrow

In the absence from the city on his vacation of the Rev. Dr. A. R. Bird, Capt. Lardner Moore, United States Army, formerly a missionary in Japan and now stationed in Washington at the War Department, will conduct both morning and evening services tomorrow at the Church of the Pilgrims, on the Parkway at the corner of Twenty-second and P Streets Northwest.

Captain Moore will preach on "The Stripes That Heal" in the morning, while his evening topic is "God's Social Order."

Starting tomorrow the Bible schoool of the church will start at 10 a. m., instead of 9:45 o'clock, as formerly.

Women's Guild Conference Opens Monday

Delegates from five States and the District of Columbia will attend the conference of the Women's Guild, Evangelical and Reformed Church, Monday through Wednesday, at Hood College, Frederick, Md.

The schedule will include courses in program building, organization and missions. Teachers will be Misses Florence Partridge, Lael Henderson and Ruth Heinmiller, national officers of the Women's Guild, and Mrs. Gilbert Schroer, recently repatriated missionary to Japan.

Dr. Gottlieb Siegenthaler, pastor of St. Matthew's Evangelical and Reformed Church, will teach a daily Bible class, and Mrs. Milton Lang, both of Baltimore, will lead daily vespers. Among local delegates will be Mrs. Lee Peeler, vice president of the Potomac Synodical Women's Guild and wife of Dr. Peeler, pastor of Bethel Evangelical and Reformed Church, Arlington, and Miss Theresa Jarrell, synodical secretary for thankofferings.

Army, Navy to Vie In Radio Bible Quiz

Army and Navy officers and enlisted men will vie in the 120th session of the WWDC Bible quiz today at 7 p. m., directed by Evangelist Dale Crowley.

Another feature of tonight's program will be solos by Homer Phillips, first trombonist of the Navy Band, accompanied by Mrs. Phillips. Evangelist Crowley is heard daily at 6:45 a. m. in the morning sunrise devotions over WWDC.

"THE NINETY AND NINE"
— — — ELIZABETH C. CLEPHANE — — —

There were ninety and nine that safely lay
In the shelter of the fold;
But one was out on the hills away,
Far off from the gates of gold.
Away on the mountains wild and bare,
Away from the tender Shepherd's care.

The first six lines of this great hymn were inspired by the situation of the lost sheep in the parable. And after describing the Shepherd's tireless search, the hymn reaches its climax at the great rejoicing when the lost sheep is found.

Bishop Moyes Will Preach At Cathedral

The Right Rev. John S. Moyes, Bishop of Armidale, New South Wales, Australia, will be guest preacher tomorrow during the Washington's Cathedral's regular 11 o'clock service.

Bishop Moyes has gained a wide reputation through his sermons and writings and has served in his present post for nearly 15 years. He is a graduate of Adelaide University and the Australian College of Theology.

Cathedral Holy Communion services will be held at 7:30 and 9:30 a. m., and the Rev. Howard Johnson, assistant at St. John's Church, will preach the sermon for evensong at 4 p. m.

Special prayers for the State of Florida will be offered tomorrow in accordance with the cathedral's custom of so honoring one State each week. The State flag of Florida will be carried in the morning processional.

Speaks Here

DR. H. E. NICELY,

Cathedral Selects Publicity Head

Mrs. Stuart Rice, wife of the assistant director of the Budget Bureau, has been appointed new public relations director of the Washington Cathedral, succeeding Mrs. Peter Kelley.

Mrs. Stuart has resided here 10 years, and has been active in civilian defense volunteer work. She is a native of Birmingham, Ala., where she worked on the Birmingham Post. She also handled publicity for Birmingham Southern College.

Italian Force Surrenders To Flying Chaplain in Sicily

By Roderick MacDonald

Representing the Combined British Press Distributed by the Associated Press

With the Glider Forces in Sicily, July 14 (Delayed).—Flying British chaplains went into action on Sicily from gliders and parachute transport planes in the early stages of the Allied invasion of this island.

One padre parachuted down with invading troops carrying a Communion set in a special body container.

Three other chaplains accompanied soldiers into action in gliders, wearing their traditional clerical collars and carrying Communion sets.

Amid the confusion of the fighting in southeastern Sicily, an Italian unit approached the Rev. Allan Buchanan, Episcopal chaplain, while he was attending the wounded, and asked him to lead them to the British lines so they could surrender.

He had no idea where the nearest British party was but acceded to the request and walked around with the Italians until he found some Allied troops.

Suburban Steeple

The Rev. Isaac Steenson, pastor of Clarendon Presbyterian Church, has found an ingenious weekday use for Sunday church bulletins, which in many churches are discarded after services.

On each bulletin is printed a Biblical text, entitled "The Promise," and adjoining it is a special prayer.

Printed above the "promise" and "prayer" is this line by the pastor:

"Here is a simple method by which religion may be made to count in your daily life."

In a statement at the bottom of the bulletin the Rev. Mr. Steenson urges:

"Carry this bulletin with you and repeat that prayer at every opportunity. Try to make every word and act conform to the prayer—for one week."

The regular Sunday bulletin has been discontinued for the summer, but in the meantime the pastor is printing the "promise" and "prayer" on small cards that are distributed at services.

Accent on Youth

Interdenominational Rally Planned Here Next Month

A city-wide interdenominational meeting rally of youth leaders will be held here in late August or early September, it was indicated at the first annual assembly of the Washington Federation of Christian Youth this week at Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H Street Northwest.

At the same meeting, new members were added to the federation's advisory committee to serve until formal elections in the fall. They were Edith Smith, Aute L. Carr, Leola Craig, John R. Kellam, Jean Goode, Albert C. Hutchinson, Virginia Albertson and Helen Doernenburg.

Main speakers were Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, Calvary Baptist pastor; Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, Federation of Churches' executive secretary; Hugo Eskildson, president of the Federation of Christian Youth, and Donald F. Bautz, Federation of Churches' defense commissioner. Miss Virginia Horseman offered a prayer. The Federation of Christian Youth is the youth unit of the Federation of Churches.

Plans are ready for the opening on Monday of the community recreational project for 'teen-agers, sponsored by 20 Protestant churches of the Mount Pleasant-Columbia Heights area. The opening night's program will be at Columbia Heights Christian Church, 1435 Park Road Northwest, from 8 to 10 p. m. Subsequent programs will be held Tuesdays, First Reformed Church; Wednesdays, Central Presbyterian Church; Thursdays, Church of Latter-Day Saints; Fridays, National Baptist Memorial Church, and Saturdays, All Souls' Unitarian Church.

Lutherans Select Summer Speakers

Guest speakers during August at Georgetown Lutheran Church will be Chaplain Charles Trexler, Army Medical Center, August 15; Lieut. Ralph W. Sell, United States Navy, August 22, and Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary, United Lutheran Board of Education, August 29.

McCormick Calls Willkie 'Foreigner'

By the Associated Press

New York, July 16.—Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of the Chicago Tribune, replying to Wendell Willkie's challenge to run in the Illinois preferential primary next April, said today: "I don't think that any foreigner can carry the State of Illinois."

Willkie disclosed yesterday that he would be a candidate for the 1944 Republican presidential nomination provided Colonel McCormick entered the Illinois primary.

Arriving here by plane from Montreal, Colonel McCormick said of the Willkie report:

"I won't pay any attention to that story and advertise that joke, I just won't talk about him.

Just a Publicity Trick, He Says

"He and his backers only couple his name with mine to get it in the newspapers. Why, anybody can beat him in Illinois. I just won't say another thing."

Col. McCormick said he believed Gov. Dwight Green or Senator Wayland Brooks should run in the primary.

Colonel McCormick shrugged off a question as to whether he would enter the Illinois preference primary. He has not said nor indicated whether he would consent to have his name entered.

Willkie, 1940 Republican Presidential nominee, revealing his plans to seek the 1944 nomination, wrote the following question and likewise the answer, which he gave out for publication:

Question and Answer

"Have you seen reports that Colonel McCormick may run in the Illinois primary for the Republican presidential nomination?"

"Yes," was his written reply. "I certainly hope it is true. For then I could really make the issue clear—the greatest issue of the day—American relations to the rest of the world and liberal internal domestic policies."

Asked if he would enter other preferential primaries, Willkie said that could be decided later. His present plan is to make a complete survey in January, then decide future moves.

Judd Gives Nats Five Hits as Bosox Win, 4-1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

At Chicago's Washington Park today, the two-year-old colt Occupy will try to duplicate the victory of his big brother, Occupation, in the $60,000 Arlington Futurity, and that's at least mildly interesting. It's a rare case in turf history when a mare turns out two great horses.

POVICH

Occupation won the race last year and went on to become the greatest 2-year-old money winner of the season, and Occupy threatens to achieve the same kind of fame. It would elevate their dam, Miss Bunting, to a new peak in breeding recognition.

Thoroughbred brothers have been plentiful but seldom have they raced to dual fame. The most notable case, of course, was Man o' War and Playfellow, the one becoming the greatest horse in American turf history and the other a colossal bust.

Playfellow came along in 1920 as a 2-year-old when Man o' War was 3. By that time, Man o' War was already the wonder horse. Playfellow, too, was by Fair Play and the mare Mahubah out of Rock Sand, and because of the identical breeding, Old Man Harry Sinclair bought him from John Madden for $100,000, envisioning another Man o' War.

Playfellow, however, became famous not on the racetracks, but as a figure in the courts. After buying him, the Rancocas Stable made the charge that Playfellow was not sound; that he was what the turf calls a "windsucker," and demanded return of the $100,000 purchase price. The case dragged on for months.

Actually, Playfellow never did show all of his running talents. He was thrown out of training during the long litigation. The courts finally upheld Sinclair and got him his money back. Playfellow, they were convinced, was, indeed a windsucker.

Specifically, Playfellow's ailment was that he took in too much air, not an unknown habit among race horses. The air, which passed to the stomach, caused a form of gas which induced colic, thus putting the horse off his feed. In the stalls, stable hands treat windsuckers by adjusting a tight strap around the horse's neck, to reduce the amount of air breathed in.

However, Playfellow when retired to the stud, failed dismally to produce any such fine foals as did his brother, Man o' War. While Man o' War sired a derby winner such as Clyde Van Duzen and fine horses like Crusader and Edith Cavell and By Hisself, Playfellow's foals were mediocre.

Within the month, Collier's Magazine took a gosh-awful blast at horse racing in a story by Kyle Crichton who condemned the race-track business as a waste of essential transportation and materials in wartime. In the current Cosmopolitan, twin stories, the one attacking, the other defending racing as a war-time sport are published.

But a correspondent of ours sees horse racing as one sure method of winning the war. "You know, racing fans will get to a track somehow, even if they have to crawl," he writes. "They cut down on trains and autos to the track, but that doesn't stop Americans from getting to the races. Here's my scheme:

"Let our Army know that there's a race track operating in Germany with programs and odds-boards in English. Or at least promise our soldiers one will be set up there. A million Americans would invade Berlin in a hurry."

When Leo Durocher accused Buck Newsom of disobeying orders by failing to pitch inside to Vince DiMaggio, of the Pirates, Newsom maintained that he did throw an inside pitch. Newspapermen later sought out DiMaggio to learn his views on the subject.

"So Durocher says it was outside, huh?" said DiMaggio. "Well, you can say for me that Newsom was right. It was an inside pitch that I hit. It was well inside, 10 inches inside, and Durocher is all wet, as usual."

Durocher was out of luck in the argument to start with inasmuch as the batter in question was the eldest of the DiMaggios. Vince was not corroborating Newsom out of any great love for Buck, but it must have been with sheer delight that he took sides against Durocher.

In 1942, when the Dodgers were trying to win the pennant and riding the opposition unmercifully, Durocher picked out DiMaggio for some of his choicest barbs. From the Dodgers' dugout, he made loud comment on the Italian ancestry of DiMaggio, whose parents had been removed from the Pacific Coastal Zone after the United States declared war. It was a pleasure for Vince to throw the hooks into Durocher in the Newsom wrangle.

Newsom Changes Mind, To Report Tomorrow, Says Browns' President

Bobo Agrees to St. Louis Shift After He Fails in Attempt to Buy Contract; Ostermueller and McKain Rebel on Dodgers

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 16.—Louis (Bobo) Newsom will appear with the St. Louis Browns in Sunday afternoon's double-header with the Cleveland Indians, Browns' President Bon Barnes said tonight.

Barnes disclosed that he talked with Newsom for a second time in several hours and the big right-hander said he would leave New York City by train tomorrow morning. He told Barnes he wanted to work in one of Sunday's games.

Since his addition to the Browns roster Wednesday in a trade which sent southpaw Pitchers Fred Ostermueller and Archie McKain to the Brooklyn Dodgers, Newsom maintained he would never put on another Brownie uniform.

Barnes would not say whether he had offered Newsom an increase in salary.

Sought His Release

Earlier in the day Newsom in a telephone conversation offered to buy his release but Barnes refused.

The other half of the transaction also rebelled today. Ostermueller and McKain demanded more pay to meet increased living costs in the East before reporting to Brooklyn.

The veteran hurlers, traded by the St. Louis Browns to the Dodgers for Bucky Buck were supposed to leave for the East tonight, but Ostermueller said they would remain here until they conferred with Branch Rickey by telephone.

Says They'll Quit

"And if he doesn't give us a salary increase, why, I guess we'll just go home," Ostermueller added.

"Living costs are so high in Brooklyn we won't be able to get along on our salaries," both players argued.

The pair called on William Dewitt, Browns general manager, to complain about the transfer. He told them the matter must be taken up with the Dodgers, whose property they now are. Rickey had not been reached late today.

Rickey Gives Dodgers Two-Hour-Long Pep Talk

Boston, July 16 (AP).—President Branch Rickey, making a surprise visit to the team, today told the Brooklyn Dodger players that Leo Durocher is firmly established as their manager and he didn't want recent unpleasant developments to have an affect on the team's morale.

Rickey addressed the players in a two-hour meeting, held in Durocher's hotel suite preceding today's game with the Boston Braves. At the end of the long session, complete harmony appeared to have been established among the players and Durocher emerged from the meeting in a happy frame of mind.

Crosetti's Hit Beats Macks For Yankees

8th-Inning Blow Brings 8-5 Score At Flores' Expense; Wensloff Pounded

New York, July 16 (AP).—The Yankees' sore back and sore leg set—Bill Dickey and Charley Keller—came back to work today and the Bombers beat out the Philadelphia Athletics 6 to 5, but it was Little Frankie Crosetti's bat that spoke the big piece.

The snappy shortstop veteran, who has put new life in the Yankee infield since being called off the bench a few weeks ago, put some of the same in the Bombers' batting attack this time with three singles, the last of which broke a deadlock and sent the winning run home in the eighth inning.

The first of Frankie's pokes came in the first inning and started a three-run rally at the expense of Jesse Flores. All three of the markers came dancing in on Nick Etten's seventh homer of the year. The Yanks added two more in the third on Bill Johnson's triple with a pair of mates aboard, after Orie Arntzen had taken over for Flores.

This sent the American League leaders 'way off in front, but the usually close-to-the-vest elbowing of Charley Wensloff came apart in the seventh as the A's clubbed him for four runs and for the first time this season Charley was driven to the showers by enemy bats.

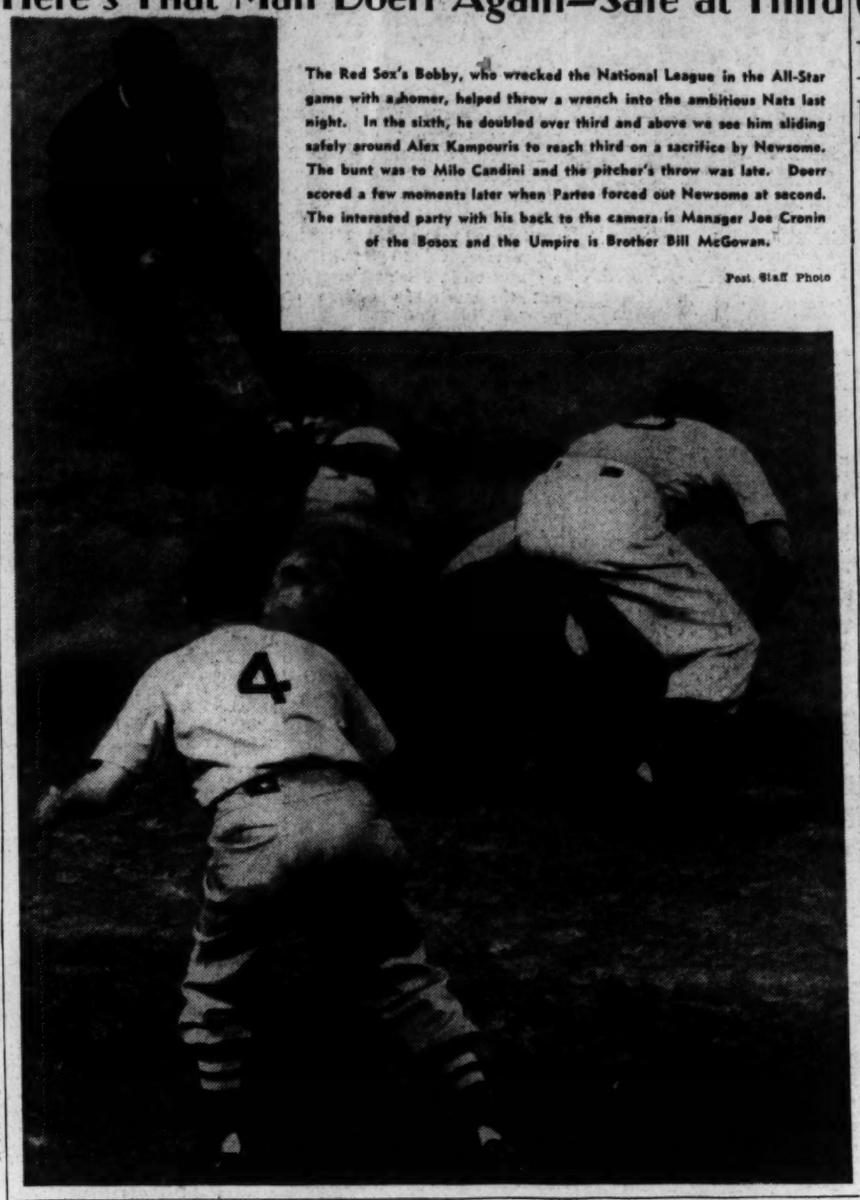
Here's That Man Doerr Again—Safe at Third



The Red Sox's Bobby, who wrecked the National League in the All-Star game with a homer, helped throw a wrench into the ambitious Nats last night. In the sixth, he doubled over third and above we see him sliding safely around Alex Kampouris to reach third on a sacrifice by Newsome. The bunt was to Milo Candini and the pitcher's throw was late. Doerr scored a few moments later when Partee forced out Newsome at second. The interested party with his back to the camera is Manager Joe Cronin of the Bosox and the Umpire is Brother Bill McGowan.

Griffs Drop Into Third Position

Candini Yields Seven Hits, Three Tallies in Eight Innings on Hill

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Oscar Judd, a left-handed character with the Red Sox, went to the mound under the Griffith Stadium lights last night and made light of the Nats. He held them to five hits and one gift run and beat them, 4 to 1, to make the 10,100 customers very unhappy.

At that, the Nats were showing improvement against Judd. The last time they faced him they were held to three hits and no runs at all.

The upshoot was that the Nats receded into third place, behind the idle Detroit Tigers, who moved into second without moving a muscle.

Added Insult to Inquiry

Toward the finish of last night's engagement the Red Sox were pouring it on. They scored their last run with a steal of home in the ninth, and added insult to larceny by trying another steal of home two pitches later.

Rookie Jim Mertz was in the box when Jim Tabor awakened him out of his reveries by stealing home on the head end of a twin steal with Tony Lupien, who galloped to third. A few moments earlier, Lupien had stolen second. After one false start, Tabor lit out for the plate and made it safely when Mertz, unaware of what was going on, dallied with his wind-up until his throw was too late.

Not presuming that Lupien would attempt any such trickery in the same inning, was young Mertz surprised. On Lupien's dash to the plate, Mertz finally got a throw away, and Umpire Rue called Lupien out. There was some discussion about that. The Sox stormed Rue, claiming Padden had dropped the ball, but got no reversal.

Red Sox Take Lead

Milo Candini started as the Washington pitcher and experienced his same old difficulty—very little to work with. He retired at the end of eight innings, after giving up seven hits and three runs, not a bad job, but nothing to compare with Judd's excellence.

In fact, the only scoring rally the Nats could muster was not much to brag about. They got their lone run in the second inning and it was comprised of one infield

Sewell Scores 13th Win; Bucs Top Cards, 9-5

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh July 16.—Rip Sewell won his thirteenth game of the season today as Pittsburbh defeated St. Louis, 9 to 5, aiding in his own victory by rapping out three hits, including a double and stealing a base.

Bob Elliott was the hitting hero, counting three doubles and a single.

Pittsburgh's victory, coupled with Brooklyn's defeat by Boston, moved the Pirates to within three and a half games of the second-place Bums.

Sewell was hit harder than at any time this season, seeming to coast along behind a five-run lead given him in the first inning. The Cardinals and the Pirates each had 15 hits.

It was the second setback in as many days for the Cards and the second defeat of the season for Howie Krist, who was replaced after the first-inning Pittsburgh rally by George Munger.

Braves Defeat Dodgers, 3-2, In 9th Inning

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 16.—Branch (The Reverend) Rickey made a special speech to the Brooklyn Dodgers today to restore peace to the troubled Bums, but apparently all Branch The Reverend succeeded in doing was to put their bats to sleep.

For, after he completed his "kiss-and-make-up" lecture, the Dodgers went out on Braves Field and were thumped 3 to 2 by the Boston Braves. Nate Andrews, husky right-hander, hand-cuffed the Brooklyns with five hits to chalk up his seventh win of the year, but the big damage was done by Johnny McCarthy, who, incidentally, was once a Dodger, himself.

With the score tied in the ninth inning, one on and one out and Freddy Fitzsimmons serving them up as the third Brooklyn elbower of the day, Johnny pounded out a triple to break up the ball game and pin the fourth defeat of the campaign on Fitzsimmons.

Browns Edge Indians in Night Tilt, 4-3

St. Louis, July 16 (INS).—Bob Muncrief pitched St. Louis to a 4-to-3 victory over the Cleveland Indians tonight, giving the Browns their second straight win over the Tribe.

Muncrief was pounded for 11 hits, but aside from home runs by Jeff Heath in the second inning and Mickey Rocco in the third, he kept the blows well scattered. The Indians' seventh inning run was unearned.

The Browns garnered only four hits off three hurlers, but three walks which loaded the bases and singles by Mark Christman and Mike Kreevich and a double play put over four runs in the first inning to give Muncrief a substantial lead.

Kreevich's hit kayoed Al Smith with his third defeat of the season.

Hagg Faces Biggest U. S. Test Today at Mile Against Dodds

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, July 16.—Gunder Hagg, the Swedish streak, will run what should prove to be the toughest race of his American tour tomorrow.

Galloping Gunder, holder of most of the world's records from 1500 to 5000 meters, will stake his prestige (he's mighty proud of it) over the distance of one mile.

The Swedish star will be running over this particular route for the first time in this country. Thus far he has made a show of it against opposition over two miles and 5000 meters.

Hagg's chief rival tomorrow at Kezar Stadium will be Gil Dodds, bespectacled divinity student from Boston. Dodds saw nothing but the lanky Hagg's back in two-mile rambles in Chicago and Los Angeles but at half the distance confidently expects to make a better showing.

The one-mile event is the Bostonian's favorite run. He won the National A. A. U. 1500 meters, or metric mile, the last two years. His best time is seconds slower than Hagg's but at least in four laps he is rated more of a fighting chance.

Griff Makes Deal To Get Curtis From Atlanta

Twenty-three - year - old Vernon Curtis, a 6-foot 3-inch right-handed pitcher, once again belongs to the Nats after a confusing set of circumstances.

Obtained from Atlanta two weeks ago, he was sent back when the deal couldn't be settled to the complete satisfaction of both Griffith and the Atlanta Club. Now, however, he belongs to the Nats after Griff agreed to a cash price and a pitcher, after Curtis reports, who is satisfactory to the Atlanta Club.

Curtis is not expected to report until the end of the Southern Association season. He is married and the father of two children.

Tigers Blank Great Lakes, 1 to 0

Great Lakes, Ill., July 16 (AP).—Roy Henshaw yielded eight hits—seven singles and a double—and allowed only one bluejacket to reach third base in pitching Detroit to a 1-0 victory over Great Lakes today.

It was the Sailors' fifth defeat in 10 games against major leaguers and their seventh setback in 38 contests this season.

The Tigers scored their lone run in the sixth inning, on singles by Al Unser and Roger Cramer.

Joe Medwick Goes to Giants For Waiver Price of $7500

Veteran Failed to Hit Best Stride This Year; Starred With Cards

By the Associated Press

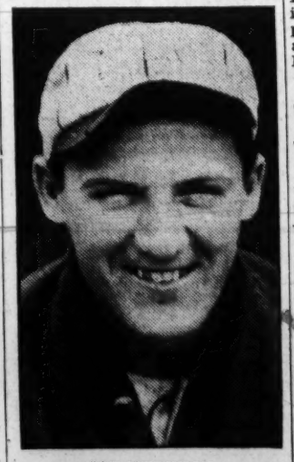
New York, July 16.—Joe Medwick, only three years ago considered one of baseball's most valuable properties, tonight was just another $7500 ball player.

The New York Giants today claimed him from the Brooklyn Dodgers for that waiver price, the transaction being the second in recent days involving a prominent Brooklyn athlete. Louis (Bobo) Newsom, pitcher, was traded to the St. Louis Browns last Wednesday.

Medwick, after a spectacular career with the St. Louis Cardinals, on June 12, 1940 was the chief figure in a six-player, $100,000 transaction between the Cardinals and Dodgers.

Five days after joining the Brooklyn club he was beaned by a pitch thrown by Bob Bowman of the Cards, and since then has not lived up to what was expected of him, although he has yet to hit less than .300 in the big show.

This season he has been used largely in a pinch-hitter role, and it is reported that Brooklyn Prexy Branch Rickey made several previous attempts to trade him.



JOE MEDWICK

Although coming close upon the heels of the Newsom deal, the Medwick transaction is in no way related to that incident. Newsom was traded as an aftermath to last week's player rebellion resulting from disciplinary action taken by Manager Leo Durocher against Newsom.

Mrs. Scandiffio Low Gross in Tourney

Mrs. M. Scandiffio turned in the low gross score of 91 at the weekly Ladies' Red Cross Victory Tourney at Indian Spring Country Club yesterday. Mrs. Willard Edwards scored the low net, 70, with 96 and a 26 handicap. Mrs. J. T. Powell won the low putts, with 28 for 18 holes.

For the visitors Mrs. Jane Nelson of Kenwood turned in the low net score of 80. She shot the course in 84 and had a four handicap.

Parks Women's Net Entries Still Open

Entries in the women's event of the National Capital Parks Tennis Association championships may still be made at the Tennis Shop, 1141 Fifteenth Street Northwest up to noon today.

Play in singles will start promptly at 9 a. m. Sunday at the East Potomac Park tennis courts. Pairings will be announced in Sunday's papers. Doubles entries will close at 10 a. m. on the East Potomac Park courts.

Garrett Wins Eastern Junior Tennis Crown

Forest Hills, N. Y., July 16 (INS).—Gene Garrett, a Californian, won the Eastern Junior Tennis crown at the Westside Club today.

The San Diego entry played a top-notch game to set back Ed Ray, a vaunted but unseeded racquet-wielder from Taft, Tex., 6—2, 6—4, 6—3.

Ray avenged the defeat in part by joining up with John Riihuloma of Bermuda to capture the doubles at the expense of Garrett and Bernard Bartzen of San Angelo, Tex., 4—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—8, 6—3.

Yank-Indian Nine Slate Pre-Flights

New York, July 16 (AP).—The New York Yankees announced today that the North Carolina Pre-Flight nine, winner of 19 out of 21 games, will meet a combined Yankee-Cleveland team on July 28, when the major leagues play the second of their war charity games.

The Indians and Yankees will tangle in a regular scheduled game before the Navy boys take the field. The Pre-Flight team is headed by Lieut. Buddy Hassett, former Yankee, and Cadet Johnny Pesky of the Boston Red Sox. Ted Williams, Red Sox slugger, also is stationed at Chapel Hill but is not expected to play.

Lefty Gomez Takes Recreational Position

Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, recently released by the Nats, has joined the recreation department of Carl L. Norden, Inc., manufacturers of the highly secret Norden bombsight. He will be in charge of the company's new recreation field in New York.

Marsch Colt Competes in Bulky Field

Speedy Colt Aims To Emulate Brother; 15 Juveniles Named, Including Alorter

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 16.—Occupy, a little bay colt gifted with sizzling speed and gameness, will attempt to match the achievement of his big brother, Occupation, by winning the $62,300 Arlington Futurity tomorrow.

Occupation won the same race a year ago.

John Marsch, a wealthy Chicago contractor, owner of Occupy and Occupation, is so confident of victory that he intends to send Broadcloth and Jezrahel along with Occupy as his color bearers in the rich 6-furlong in an attempt to make a clean sweep of the Futurity.

If he does, he will emulate the accomplishment of the Calumet Farm's entry of 1941 when Sun Again, Some Chance and Wishbone scored a 1-2-3 grand slam.

Warren Wright of Chicago, owner of the Calumet Farms, will not have a starter in tomorrow's race. Only Patriotism, among the Calumet juvenile colts, has faced the barrier and he failed to distinguished himself.

Occupy, rated as the fastest juvenile in the West, won three of his four races, losing only to Alorter by a nose in the Primer Stakes June 24. Alorter, owned by A. C. Ernst of Cleveland, Ohio, will be in the field of 15 tomorrow and also will have a stablemate, Albuldo, in the running.

Alorter, by reason of two stake victories, will be top-weighted at 122 pounds with Occupy carrying 116. Jockey Lawrence Whiting, who has ridden occupy in his four races, will be astride him tomorrow.

To date the speedy Occupy has won only $3700, but if he pokes his nose across the finish line tomorrow, he will drag down a check for $50,900. The next three horses will collect $6000, $3000 and $1500 in that order.

A $500 Look-See

With $500 posted he will make 145 pounds for his 10-round scrap with Lightweight Champion Bob Montgomery at Griffith Stadium, Frankie Wills, D. C. welterweight champion, and his special trainer, Heinie Blaustein, one of the fight game's foremost handlers of fighters, anxiously regard the scales after a workout in Wills' Baltimore training camp. The scales said 144½, pleasant news to both of them. Herman Taylor, Philadelphia promoter, visited Baltimore yesterday in an effort to sign Wills for a return bout with "Tiger Bob" for the Quaker City in the event the local boy upsets the lightweight champion.

hit by Kampouris, Jim Tabor's wold throw on same, an infield out that moved Kampouris to third with two out, and a wild pitch by Judd.

None of the Nats five hits amounted to anything more than a single.

The Red Sox took a 1-0 lead in the second inning, on a walk to Newsome and singles by Partee and Culberson. They stepped into a 2-1 advantage in the sixth after Doerr led off with a double. On Newsome's sacrifice, Candini's throw to third was late, and Doerr scored a bit later on Partee's grounder to Sullivan.

They pried another run out of Candini in the eighth when Newsome led off with a single to left and eventually scored on Culberson's single to center.

Judd had the help of Rookie Mike Metkovich in right field in turning back the Nats scoreless in the seventh. The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following was written before the Allies yesterday notified Italy she could surrender honorably or be blasted out of the war.

Proposal to Sound Out Italians on Peace

FRIENDS of the President are suggesting a plan whereby prominent Italo-Americans and friends of the Vatican might bring an early peace with Italy, thereby saving loss of life on both sides.

The plan would be to send the following men to Sicily or a nearby neutral country to negotiate with the Vatican and those in touch with Mussolini, possibly Count Ciano:

(1) Judge Ferdinand Pecora, Italian-born Supreme Court Judge of New York, a close friend of the President, who staged the sensational Senate Banking Committee probe of the Stock Market which led to the establishment of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Pecora is a liberal Italian who, though often invited to Rome by Mussolini, never fell for Il Duce's wiles.

(2) Col. Charley Poletti, former lieutenant-governor of New York, now in the Army.

(3) George MacDonald, wealthy utilities and oil magnate, full of titles and honors, including Commendatore of the Order of the Crown of Italy, Knight of St. Gregory, Papal Chamberlain of the Cape and Sword, Papal Marquis, Knight Commander Grand Cross of the Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem, vice president and trustee of St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. He is a big benefactor of Catholic and secular charities, and is close to the Vatican.

(4) Maj. Frank Capra, Italian-born motion picture producer, who has made history with some of his epochal films, especially his latest training films for the Army. Capra, never a Mussolini-lover, is immensely popular with the Italian masses. They think of him as the little immigrant boy who conquered Hollywood.

Actually the President won't need much urging regarding such a move, for he has worked on a plan somewhat similar in the past. Once he sent U. S. Steel's Myron Taylor, U. S. Ambassador to the Vatican, on a special visit to the Pope, and the envoy landed on Italian soil during wartime to reach him.

Later Roosevelt sent Archbishop Spellman to the Vatican. These trips were not successful. However, it is significant that Mussolini appointed his son-in-law, Count Ciano, as Ambassador to the Vatican. This at first was considered a demotion, since Ciano was formerly Foreign Minister. But now diplomats report that he is using his influence to save American lives in knocking Italy out of the war. If helping the Ciano family to exile would save lives, the President would certainly consider it.

Giraud Flunks Geography

Gen. Henri Giraud made a slight slip in geography when he called the Washington headquarters of his Free French rival, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, but the commander-in-chief of French forces in North Africa let one and all know that he's still boss.

Greeting a disabled Free French war vet, Giraud inquired where he had been wounded.

"In Tunisia," replied the vet.

"Whom were you with?" asked Giraud.

The forces of General Leclerc, sir."

"Then you couldn't have been in Tunisia," demurred the French leader sternly.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, sir, but I was very definitely with General Le Clerc in Tunisia," insisted the soldier. "I fought on the Mareth Line."

There were a few polite chckles at Giraud's expense, but the general quickly composed himself. With a smile, he remarked:

"Well, you young men seem to be very well versed in your geography—a lot better than some of your leaders. After all, I am only the commander-in-chief of all the French forces in North Africa."

Synthetic Food Shortage

Every housewife in the United States is conscious of what she believes to be a food shortage.

But what housewives don't realize is that the recent collapse of submarine warfare has contributed to the "food shortage." The sharp falling off in shipping losses has meant an increase in the number of ships available to move supplies of all sorts, including food.

Russian ships are waiting at Pacific ports, and the ships of all Allied nations are waiting at Atlantic ports for that great universal weapon of life and warfare—food.

We are producing more food than ever before, and—hard to believe—the people of the country, including the soldiers within the country, are eating more now than ever before. In other words, there is no shortage relative to our past demands, but only relative to our swollen wartime appetites and pocketbooks.

Thus there is no actual food shortage. It is only that the supply of some foods is inadequate to meet the unprecedented purchasing power of the American housewife.

Note: How long will it take after the war to get back to crop restrictions?

Art Gallery Gets Whistler Work

The National Gallery of Art announced yesterday that its board of trustees had accepted the gift of two paintings by James Abbot McNeill Whistler from the Harris Whittemore collection.

The paintings are "The White Girl" and "L'Andalouse." "The White Girl" was finished in 1862 and was first exhibited in 1863 at the Salon des Refuses along with work by French Impressionists. "L'Andalouse" was painted some 30 years later and is typical of Whistler's later style.

Holiday Week Cuts Capital Stores' Sales

Washington department stores sales showed a dip of only 1 per cent in the abbreviated holiday week ended July 10, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. Monday, July 5, was observed as the Independence Day holiday this year.

For the four weeks ended July 10, local store sales were 14 per cent heavier than in the corresponding period last year. The entire Fifth Reserve District showed an increase of 19 per cent in the same week.

Retail trade continued brisk this week although a seasonal downtrend was apparent, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday. The countrywide gain for the week was estimated at 8 to 14 per cent over 1942. Said the business research organization:

"While seasonal downtrend is in evidence, sportswear, luggage and farmers' supplies have been most active. Wines, liquors, foodstuffs and gift items continued in demand.

"Women's clothing (except hosiery), china, luggage and shoes are in good supply, whereas household items and other staples, such as jewelry, pillowcases, foundation garments and men's clothing, show the most pronounced signs of scarcity."

The organization's trade review said increased promotions in many stores of fall and winter coats had been advanced in order to make up for the loss of volume in house furnishings, metal goods and kitchenware.

The Washington Post

*X SATURDAY, JULY 17, 1943 1B

Hopeful Sign

Gettysburg, Pa., July 16.—"The war will be over in three months or less," one of the 22 Adams County selectees who reported for duty yesterday with the Army shouted to the crowd as he boarded a bus here.

Asked how he could be so sure, the man answered: "Because I've never held a job for more than three months in my life."

Watch Your Step, Mac

The traditional one-armed paperhanger with the hives had nothing on Tom Moore McBride, Post reporter, who sprained an ankle while fishing and then, yesterday, while sitting on the grass, caught a flock of chiggers underneath the cast on his left foot.

The Federal Diary

current and accumulated annual leave has been and should be curtailed. After permissible vacation leave (usually not more than two weeks or 12 working days) is taken or reserved for vacations, employes should be permitted to use, if they so desire, any additional leave to which they are entitled for short periods of absence for personal business at a rate, for example, of a few hours off every two or three weeks.

"All supervisors should be directed to exercise a liberal attitude toward granting employes short periods of leave for the conduct of personal business. Such periods of leave are, of course, to be taken at such times as will not jeopardize the work on which the employes are engaged. In addition, in order to maintain the continuity of Government business on Saturday afternoons, departments and agencies should, in adopting a policy in conformity with this memorandum, restrict its application usually to days other than Saturday."

Women Find Way to Defeat Black Market

An idea to combat black market prices which was born of a New Orleans business club and carried into effect with amazing success by the housewives of that city is soon to become the pattern for similar projects in Washington and other cities throughout the Nation, an OPA spokesman revealed late yesterday.

MRS. CAHN

The idea is already being tried out in Cleveland and Dallas and before long the plan—known officially as the Home Front Pledge Campaign—will be started in almost every city and town in the country.

"Go Ahead" Awaited

A check with District OPA disclosed while no tangible steps are being taken as yet to install the plan locally, word to go ahead is expected soon from the regional office in New York.

Briefly, the idea, as explained by Mrs. Moise Cahn, volunteer director of the War Block Service in New Orleans, in her press conference at the local OCD, is this:

Educate the housewife as to what her grocer must do under OPA price and rationing regulations and have her sign a pledge she will not patronize any store that fails to measure up to OPA standards.

"Through our highly organized War Block Services we have been able to contact the housewives in their homes. Forty-eight hours after the plan began, which was during the first week in May, we had taken 300,000 pledges.

"Each food buyer was given a sticker reminding her of the pledge to be put into her ration book.

To Be Cited Today

City News In Brief

The arrest of three Negro youths early yesterday cost police . . . four scout car tires, two bruised police noses and the loss of another police car for 15 minutes.

It all started after the trio rifled the pockets of Kenneth D. Ewing, 2806 Ontario Road Northwest, when he fell asleep in his automobile. Another citizen saw the robbery and called police with a description and tag numbers of the thieves' car.

Scout Car 71 containing Policeman Carl Dean and Joseph Anderson spotted the auto in Georgetown and gave chase. They radioed for assistance and Cars 41, 42, 11 and a traffic car joined in. They sped across Key Bridge into Virginia and finally circled the Pentagon Building.

The fugitive car ran out of gas and before Scout 71 could stop, it ran over a sidewalk, blowing out the tires and skinning the noses of the policemens. Nevertheless they apprehended the occupants of the bandit car.

Meanwhile Scout Car 41 got caught in the maze of Pentagon driveways and had to be led back to the main highway by Arlington County police.

Heat Prostration

Pearl Brown, 32, of 514 E Street Northwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital yesterday for heat prostration after she had collapsed in the Red Circle Restaurant, Massachusetts Avenue and North Capitol Street. Her condition was not serious and she was discharged.

Three Sentenced On Robbery Charge

Three Negroes were sentenced yesterday to two to six years in jail after being found guilty in District Court of robbing Joseph Small, Negro, 803 N Street Northwest, of $430 in February.

The defendants are Theodore Anderson, 22; James Edwards, 22, and Herman Leech, 23. All had been convicted of the charge previously, but were granted a new trial.

Iturbi Pleases in D. C. Debut As Orchestra Conductor

By Ray C. B. Brown

Jose Iturbi conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the fourteenth summer concert at the Potomac Waterside on Friday night. Program: Overture to "Rienzi" (Wagner); Symphony No. 2 in D major (Brahms). Soliloquy (Iturbi). Intermezzo from "Goyescas" (Granados). Hungarian Rhapsody No. 4 in C sharp major (Liszt).

Always a popular visitor here as a virtuoso pianist, Jose Iturbi made his local debut as a conductor last evening at the Potomac Watergate, where he directed the National Symphony Orchestra in its fourteenth summer concert. The event proved that a soloist is not indispensable as a drawing card, for an audience of some 6000 persons assembled not to hear the distinguished musician play but to observe him in action on the podium and assess his ability as an interpreter of symphonic works. That they were favorably impressed was evident in the cordiality of their applause and in their close attention to his readings. Having put his virtuosity aside, he was plainly a sincere servant of his art, intent upon the disclosure of the composers' ideas.

BROWN

He began with one of the many operatic overtures which might as well be called concert overtures, since one never hears the operas themselves. In this case it was Wagner's "Rienzi," the second of that master's operas, though the first to be staged. That Wagner more or less repudiated this work is not the only reason why it is seldom performed these days. Auditors a century ago were either more patient with lengthiness or could absorb more music at one sitting than they can today. The first performance of "Rienzi" on October 20, 1942, in Dresden started at 6 o'clock and ended just before midnight, yet the Dresdenites liked this five-act, semihistorical tragedy so much that two more performances were given within 10 days. Today the overture serves to show the dawn of the Wagnerian style which was to reach so resplendent a noon.

Iturbi's major offering was the D major symphony of Brahms, and he gave it an earnest and eloquent reading—earnest in the attention to details of instrumentation and eloquent in the projection of its cheerful mood. The natural, everyday Brahms speaks in this music more frankly than in his other three symphonies, and he probably considered it a good self-portrait, for, reserved as he was in discussing his own works, he often referred to the D major symphony in terms of warmth and affection.

After the intermission, Iturbi introduced a composition of his own, "Soliloquy," which left one a little puzzled about the meaning of the title. Unfortunately, the work had not been sufficiently rehearsed, and sounded at times as though it were being read at sight. This was the fault neither of the conductor nor the orchestra, but of limited time. The music left the impression of some personal reminiscences on the part of the composer. It has plenty of color and vitality, and abounds in Iberian rhythms.

The concert continued with the intermezzo from Granados' "Goyescas" and the most familiar of Liszt's many Hungarian rhapsodies. The program, calling it "No. 4," seemed to promise an unfamiliar one, but it was the same old C sharp major. When Liszt and Franz Doeppler orchestrated six of the piano rhapsodies, they changed the order of the ones selected, and in the shuffle No. 2 became No. 4.

Fausth Anthony Funeral Rites Set for Monday

Fausth Anthony, 64, of 801 Webster Street Northwest, died yesterday morning at Doctors Hospital of heart trouble.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Anthony.

Funeral service will be held at 9 a. m. Monday at Deal funeral home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest, with Stansbury Lodge No. 24, F. A. A., of which he was a member taking part in the service.

Rooming Regulations Amended

More Living Space, Illumination Ordered In Move to Prevent Fires, Assure Health

The Commissioners last night added nearly a score of amendments to the rooming and boarding house regulations that have been in a constant state of revision since Congress demanded that something be done about the increasing number of rooming house fires.

Most important of these regulations as far as fire safety is concerned is the one specifying 400 cubic feet of air space shall be allowed each person in a sleeping room, counting 50 square feet of floor space with an 8-foot ceiling clearance in houses built after July 10, 1942 and 7 feet clearance in houses built prior to that date.

This ruling more explicit than the present one, is the one by which the Commissioners hope to prevent fire casualties by prohibiting overcrowding.

To further morality in rooming houses, the Commissioners ordered that a certificate of moral character be obtained for each rooming house licensee, and if the licensee does not reside on the premises, a resident manager, also morally acceptable to the police, be provided.

Every rooming house must be registered with the Health Office, and each guest, with his room number, and dates of arrival and departure must be registered on the premises. No room may be occupied by persons of opposite sex unless they be man and wife, or children accompanied by their parents or wards.

No sleeping facilities will be permitted in any room containing a furnace, domestic water heater or gas meter or space heater, unless such space heater is effectively connected with a flue.

What one rooming house proprietor at the hearing on new regulations described as a "great American tradition" — changing only the top sheet of the bed each week—will be tolerated under the new regulations.

Complying with another request made at the hearing, the Commissioners ruled the specification of at least one bath provided for each 10 roomers be relaxed by allowing a credit of three persons for each additional water closet and one person for each additional wash basin. No more than 16 persons may be included in the quota for one bath plus any number of auxiliary equipment.

During the emergency, the rulings on bathroom facilities will not apply to houses lacking in-door water and sewer accommodations, if a water closet is "reasonably" accessible to all occupants.

Rooms must be provided with artificial lighting to the extent of one 40 to 75 watt electric bulb for general living and one 50 to 100 watt bulb for reading.

Guest House Assertions Draw Denial

No Friction Exists On Enforcement of Regulations, D. C. Commissioners Say

By Roger Young
Post Staff Writer

Stung by The Post's disclosures of subordinate District officials' statements that enforcement of safety regulations for rooming and boarding houses was not being pursued energetically, the Commissioners last night categorically denied those statements.

The officials quoted, however, were unable to show any instance wherein they were misquoted or deliberately misinterpreted.

"The author (of The Post article) discussed with Mr. Davis, the director of inspections, all the regulations under study by the Commissioners at the time to meet the situation brought on by the war, and Mr. Young attempted to entrap Mr. Davis into making a statement wholly beyond and outside the proposed regulation . . . and to make it appear first, that there was friction between the offices of the building inspector and the corporation counsel's offices, and that the Commissioners were wishy-washy in their policy," the Commissioners' statement read.

What the Commissioners interpreted as an attempt to "entrap" was insistence by the reporter that Davis discuss the enforcement of the building regulations.

Not Going So Well

"I'd rather not discuss that," Davis said at first. Again he said he "had no comment to make." Reminded by the reporter that this kind of statement left the reader of a newspaper story open to all kinds of supposition, Davis finally said the enforcement by prosecution was "not going so well."

He explained that few cases got to court, and that on those he was able to get but few convictions because "the court was more in sympathy with the housing shortage in Washington than with observance of regulations."

"The only way we can handle violations well lies through the Board of Condemnation, which can close a house on grounds of insanitation or danger. A house has to be practically falling in on the tenant before we can get a court case on it." Davis added.

After the Commissioners' attack on The Post article, however, Davis told the reporter that he had in mind the Health Department occupancy regulations. The health regulations were not the subject of conversation at the time. He said furthermore that he didn't want to get many cases into court, although he had not mentioned that before when saying enforcement was "not going so well."

As to the Commissioners' feeling that the reporter was trying to make it appear that they were "wishy-washy" in their policy, that would seem to refer to the mention of their ruling last spring that all rooming houses of certain classes must install iron fire escapes, and their subsequent reversal of this order—after some 118 operators had been given police notice of prosecution—when the War Production Board ruled that iron was not obtainable for this purpose.

Continuing their version of District Building management, the Commissioners said, "the first statement, more or less innuendo in character, that there is friction between department heads, is wholly without foundation and Mr. Davis denies it emphatically and without equivocation."

This statement, that the building inspector reported difficulty in getting violators of his regulations into court because of the reluctance of the corporation counsel to handle them, was further corroborated by Corporation Counsel Vernon West. West told the reporter, and later repeated to Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, that many of the cases referred to the corporation counsel were more for violations of standards of appearance and comfort than of safety. As a result they were not taken to court because the legal staff didn't see how it could make cases of them.

Difference in Policy

What The Post article pointed out was a difference of policy with the resultant possible impairment of coordination. If difference of opinion necessarily means friction, then to report that Assistant Engineer Commissioner Joseph D. Arthur, jr., said "there has been no indication whatever that the courts are inclined to be lenient because of the overcrowded conditions in Washington," when Davis had said the contrary, might be considered by the Commissioners an innuendo that there was "friction" between the Engineer Commissioner and the building inspector.

Arthur, in a separate statement, charged that "the implication of the story in today's Post that the Commissioners have in any way relaxed their efforts to rigidly enforce the rooming, boarding and lodging house regulations is entirely contrary to the fact. In clear terms I so informed the author of the article in person. The statement attributed to the director of inspection is likewise unfounded."

Yet in the next paragraph Arthur admits that he "suggested to the superintendent of licenses that he hold in abeyance the prosecution of certain parties who are operating without a license, pending approval of the new regulations." The fact he brings out in the next paragraph, that the new regulations were to be approved yesterday, did not alter the previous fact that for some time the superintendant of licenses had been instructed to "hold prosecution in abeyance" and that a check of applications for informations in the corporation counsel's office proved that they had been held so in abeyance that there has not been a single prosecution asked during the last two months.

"The majority of the rejections to date had been due to overcrowding, generally insanitary conditions and inadequate bathing facilities. In each instance the owner or operator has been advised in writing of the reasons for the rejection." Arthur continued. "If the conditions existing at the time of inspection are not corrected and the rooming house continues to operate, the Commisioners fully intend to bring the violators into court."

The Commissioners have stated the same intention time after time, especially when fresh rooming house fire fatalities force Congress and the District public to demand action of them. Yet—whether because of confusion of authority, contradiction of orders, or suggestions that prosecution be "held in abeyance"—the record stands that very few such cases have actually been taken into court.

The Commissioners ended their protest against The Post story by reference to the war conditions, the overcrowding conditions and the lack of obtaining critical materials as reasons for making their regulations "elastic."

Singers at Starlight Concert To Offer Variety of Ballads

TICKETS FOR CONCERT—Among the girls of the OPA who received tickets for the starlight concert tomorrow are (left to right) Esther Crowell, Alice Jennings and Christina Grifone

The American Ballad Singers will relate the story of America in rollicking music that has sprung spontaneously from throughout the country at the fifth in the series of Washington Post Starlight Concerts at 8:30 o'clock tonight in Meridian Hill Park.

A number of diplomats and officials in Government agencies plan to attend tonight and tomorrow night. An entirely different program will be given by the singers Sunday night.

Covering three centuries of American history, the ballads on the program will begin with Revolutionary days and continue to modern times with street cries of Brooklyn peddlers and a tribute to war heroes.

Two hundred employes of the Office of Price Administration and the Department of the Interior will attend as special guests tonight with tickets given to them by The Washington Post. Officials who will be introduced as representatives of these agencies include J. Philip Wernette, war goods price coordinator, and Frank T. Gartside, assistant superintendent of the National Capital Parks Service.

Van Lier Lanning, director of the War Production Board Symphony Orchestra of 63 instruments, will speak briefly as a representative of the 200 WPB workers to whom will be given free tickets for the concert.

Dr. Jose T. Baron, Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, commended the concert series yesterday. He said he was particularly interested in hearing the American Ballad Singers Sunday night because of his interest in native culture of the United States.

Other diplomats planning to attend include Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador to the United States; Vladimir Hurban, Czecho-Slovak Minister, and Mme. Hurban; Luis Gauchalla, Bolivian Ambassador; Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, Belgian Ambassador, and his Countess; Jan Ciechanowski, Polish Ambassador to the United States, and Mrs. Ciechanowska.

Elie Siegmeister is director of the American Ballad Singers. Others, each of whom is distinguished as a soloist, include Helen Yorke, Ruth Fremont, Rebekah Crawford, Thomas Edwards, Emile Renan and Earl Waldo.

Service men and women who attend in uniform will be admitted without charge to the unreserved section. Tickets may be purchased at the Cappel Concert Bureau in Ballard's, 1340 G Street Northwest, and at the park box office for 55c, $1.10 and $1.65.

Vacationists Swamp Board For 'A' Permits

Vacation-seeking Washingtonians have in two days swamped local rationing boards with 1017 applications for permission to use their A gasoline coupons for summer vacation trips, it was revealed yesterday.

There were 481 applications up to early yesterday, but as the blistering July sun brought an oven-like heat to the pavements, and as the mercury climbed to a high of 93 degrees at 5 p. m. the mountains and seashores beckoned. By 6 p. m. yesterday the applications had soared to the 1017 figure.

The District Office of Price Administration meanwhile announced the names of seven persons convicted by local ration boards on charges of pleasure driving.

Outstanding were the cases of John Elliott of 5061 First Street Northwest, and Charles J. Wells of 3422 Ashley Terrace Northwest. Elliott was fined 16 C coupons by board 31 when he admitted he had driven to a nearby Maryland race track on two occasions.

Others who were convicted are: Jesse Long of 912 F Street Southwest, fined 2 "A" coupons by Board 50; Edward Neff, 3009 Douglas Street Northwest, fined 1 "A" coupon and William H. Campbell, 1829 H Street Northeast, both fined 1 "A" coupon each by Board No. 42; James Lauderdale of 1424 Webster Street Northwest, fined 2 "A" coupons by Board No. 31; Ruben Malett of 4301 Jennifer Street Northwest, fined 1 "A" coupon by Board 21.

OPA Bans Driving in Gas Violation

Panel Suspends Use of Car After Owner Failed Twice To Heed Notices

Failing to show up after twice being notified, proved costly to Charles B. England and his wife in the OPA special panel court hearing alleged violators of the pleasure driving ban.

England, who lives at 610 Eighth Street Northeast, was given a two month's suspension of driving his automobile—the equivalent of four A book gasoline coupons.

Six others of a docket of 13 cases were assessed penalties in the sixth session of the special panel board, held at the Force School Building, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Others Penalized

Mildred Soldani, 2325 Fifteenth Street Northwest, also notified twice for alleged violation of the pleasure driving ban, was fined two A coupons and two week's B's, and John Glenn, 2505 Sherman Avenue Northwest, who operates a truck fleet, forfeited three A coupons and had his B book retained until he has his tires inspected.

Dr. Edwin F. Daily, 4928 Albemarle Street Northwest, who admitted that he took his 2-year-old child to the zoo, when he "found time to get off a couple of hours" was penalized one A coupon and two week's of Bs.

George H. Watts, 2005 Naylor Road Southeast, was assessed three A coupons and Fulton R. Gordon, 5100 Manning Place Northwest, who admitted taking his daughter and friends to a country club during a rain, was fined one A coupon. William Berry, 28 G Street Southwest, forfeited two coupons.

Cases Dismissed

It appeared that the three-man board had Samuel Isaac, a Negro living at 906 Florida Avenue Northwest, dead to rights when an OPA investigator testified that he had observed the Isaac automobile parked at a filling station near Griffith Stadium.

Isaac admitted it. He also admitted that he went to the ball game and usually saw all of the prize fights at the park as well.

Isaac stammered but finally he made Peter Connolly, acting chairman of the hearing board understand. Isaac, it developed owned an interest in the filling station and lived upstairs over it.

The case was dismissed.

Cases against Earl Towles, George Comer and Leighton E. Williams also were dismissed. Two others failed to show up when their names were called. They were Dorothy Knox, 820 H Street Northeast, and Bess C. Miles, 1789 Lanier Place.

Victory Sidelights

Teachers Attend Conference

Five District public school system administrators yesterday completed participation in a ten-day conference on "The Elementary Schools in Wartime" conducted at Columbia University, New York City.

They are Mrs. Juanita M. Winn, supervisor grades 4, 5 and 6; Miss Mary Marshall, supervisor of student teachers, Wilson Teachers College; Miss Dorothea A. Cook, administrative principal Buchanan School; Mrs. Florence N. Cornell, principal of J. Q. Adams School, and Mrs. Bessie W. Cramer, administrative principal Wheatly School.

Sylvan Theater Play

The District Recreation Department will present the melodrama "The Country Squire" today at 8:30 p. m. in the Sylvan Theater, Monument grounds. William Jarvis is director of the performance.

Wartime Advertising

Chester LaRoche, chairman of the National War Advertising Council, will speak of a conference on wartime advertising, Tuesday at 8 p. m. in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. The conference is being sponsored by the Advertising Club of Washington.

Swimming Program

The District Recreation Department, in cooperation with the Welfare and Recreation Association and the American Red Cross, will conduct a "Victory Builder Swim" program next week. Swimming tests will be given at the public pools.

Test of Artists

The War Hospitality Committee will hold auditions at 7:30 p. m. Monday in the Thomson School, Twelfth and L Streets Northwest, for dancers and singers and specialty artists who will volunteer for entertainment programs for servicemen.

'Desperadoes' Glorifies The 'Western,' at Earle

Magnificent Technicolor Graces Vivid Melodrama Interpreted by an Ace Cast; Cliff Edwards Headlines Stage Revue

"THE DESPERADOES." Columbia picturization of a story by Max Brand, adapted to the screen by Robert Carson, starring Randolph Scott, Glenn Ford and Guinn Williams, with Claire Trevor, Evelyn Keyes, Edgar Buchanan, Raymond Walburn, Porter Hall, Joan Woodbury, Bernard Nedell, Irving Bacon, Glenn Strange, Ethan Laidlaw, Charles Whittaker, Edward Pawley and Chester Clute. Directed by Charles Vidor. At the Earle Theater.

ADD TO ALL THE INGREDIENTS—well, almost all—ever incorporated in a grand scale "Western," settings of majestic grandeur, set off by Technicolor photography that multiplies their magnificence, and you have a sketchy background against which a fully competent cast works out a tempestuous story of many ramifications in "The Derperadoes," Columbia's super-de luxe "gun opera," which opened yesterday on the screen at the Earle Theater.

A "Western," of course, is a "Western," but some are better than others and this is one of the best.

The basis of the present narrative is the methodical plundering of a bank made rich by the sale of horses to the Army in the early days of Utah by an ostensibly unknown group of bandits. When "Cheyenne" Rogers bobs up in the town with a price on his head, suspicion is speedily focussed on him and his rugged pal "Dynamite." The pointing of the finger seems not ill-advised, since Cheyenne, masquerading as Bill Smith, has ridden in on the sheriff's horse, taken from him at gun point while his back was turned.

As it turns out, he and Sheriff Steve Upton were once partners and are still pals. Naturally, they both love the same girl, assistant to her deep-running Dad in the conduct of the postoffice and town livery stable.

"The Countess," who operates the swankiest hotel and gambling joint, knows everybody, too, including Cheyenne and Banker Stanley Clanton and his righthand road agent, Jack Lester. Romances criss-cross the action like slits in a cherry pie crust. So do gun fights, fist fights, jail breaks, wild horse stampedes, cross-country chases and bursts of rough-and-ready comedy.

As we were saying, "The Desperadoes" overlooks nothing—except, possibly, an Indian massacre—that ever contributed to making the "Western" the most popular motion picture form known to the cameras.

There are times, to be sure, when the scenic splendors of the West pretty thoroughly dwarf the actors—only in the long-shots, though—and occasionally the violence of the barroom brawls and the interjection of comedy at moments of high stress are a shade hard to take, but, by and large, there is nothing sufficiently the matter with "The Desperadoes" to keep it off the top of the list of the year's all-out cinematic cyclones. Incidentally, that stampede of wild horses, an absolute essential to the successful climax of the picture, is no ordinary loping race.. It is a thundering maelstrom of thousands of range horses, photographed with a sweep and a kaleidoscopic splendor that has never been matched. There is a great deal in the magnitude of the film that has never been matched, as far that goes.

Cast Knows Its Way Around the West

The titular figures of the play are not so easy to identify as might be thought. They seem to be, at first, Glenn Ford and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, who play Cheyenne and Dynamite with robustious skill, an occasional touch of gentleness and more than a modicum of comedy. There are moments when one can't be sure that easy-going Sheriff Upton isn't in on the banditry, but with his long experience in this sort of thing, Randolph Scott brings the character out right side up before it is too late. Feminine interest centers in Evelyn Keyes and Glenda Farrell, as Allison MacLeod, the apple of Utah's eye, and "The Countess," with Miss Keyes necessarily eliciting most of the sympathy as the girl who falls desperately in love with Cheyenne, desperado, or no desperado, and emphasizes the perplexity of her position by an excellent performance. As her droll and doting father, Edgar Buchanan contributes one of his delightfully quizzical characterizations, thereby edging up into the stellar brackets. Porter Hall and Bernard Nedell are the oily "heavies" of the piece and Raymond Walburn and Irving Bacon have busy hands in the comedy as the town's "legal lawyer" and leading bartender, respectively. The real star of the picture, that glosses over and glorifies everything in it, however, is Technicolor.

The new stage bill at the Earle is largely vocal when it isn't the Roxyettes. With Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards as headliner, the business is sure-fire. The debonair Mr. Edwards and his uke can do things to a song, a little beyond the reach of any competition. Interlarding his tunes with a few zippy anecdotes and a story or two, he walked off with high honors at yesterday's first performance. So did Lowe, Hite and Stanley, that unique and familiar trio that ranges from a midget to a giant and has learned how to make the comic most of their variations in height. Their pantomime to a couple of Andrews Sisters records is something. Garfield Swift barytones his way to favor, while the Roxyettes cavort in their "Cowboy Dummy," "Autograph" and "Rumba" routines—all very very.

"Women in Blue," dedicated to the WAVES; a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," with Ted Husing enunciating the part boxing plays in the physical training of all the services; "Greetings, Bait," one of the best of the Merrie Melodie cartoon comedies, and a timely "invasion" newsreel complete a bill that had and will have them hanging from the chandeliers.

The Three Tough Hombres of the Title

RANDOLPH SCOTT, GLENN FORD, GUINN WILLIAMS as they appear in the stellar roles in Columbia's Technicolor production of "The Desperadoes," which yesterday began its first Washington engagement on the screen at the Earle Theater. The principal feminine roles are taken by Evelyn Keyes and Glenda Farrell, with Edgar Buchanan and a robust cast in support.

New Musical at Metropolitan At Best When Strictly Musical

By Marjorie Kelly

"WHAT'S BUZZIN', COUSIN." Columbia picturization of a screen play by Harry Sauber, starring Ann Miller, Edward ("Rochester") Anderson and John Hubbard, with Freddy Martin, Leslie Brooks, Jeff Donnell, Carol Hughes, Theresa Harris, Roy Gordon, Bradley Page, Warren Ashe, Dub Taylor, Betsy Gay and Louis Mason. Directed by Charles Barton. At the Metropolitan Theater.

If you can manage to doze comfortably through the comedy and "dramatic" sequences of "What's Buzzin', Cousin?" and snap wide awake when the orchestra strikes up for the musical numbers, then I think you'll have a good time seeing the film which opened yesterday morning at the Metropolitan.

There's quite a bit to recommend it, as a matter of fact. To begin with, Ann Miller. The nimble-toed little dancer, who was last seen here as the wake 'em up girl in "Reveille With Beverley," has two song-and-dance numbers, compared to one in "Beverley," and it would be fine for this one if she had a great many more. She sings joyously, and zestfully, puts plenty of zip into her dancing, and her figure is just about all a collector of pin-ups could ask for.

Freddie Martin is involved, too, with his orchestra, and I'm pleased to tell you that he is seen and heard frequently in the course of the proceedings. He directs the orchestra in a rendition of Franz Liszt's Second Hungarian Rhapsody that starts out sweet and winds up hot, and would hardly offend enthusiasts on either side of the line.

Rochester an Asset

Eddie ("Rochester") Anderson's presence in the cast is another recommendation for it, but though he does his best with the lines he has been given to say, its' a losing battle. He is himself, and very agreeable, when he gets a chance to sing—the number being "Fat, Short and 4-F." He has a girl friend who looks as if she might give Lena Horne some competition in time—a luscious dish by the name of Theresa Harris. Miss Harris has an impishly pretty face and a pleasing, husky voice.

The plot has to do with a group of girls who pay off a tax lien on an old hotel, which has been left one of them (Ann Miller) by her grandfather, and drive out to take possession. Whey they get there, they find the hotel is deserted and located in a ghost town. By a lucky coincidence, however, Freddy Martin's Band is occupying it at the moment, having run out of gas while on their way through the town. Freddy's soloist, John Hubbard, takes a liking to Miss Miller and decides to pull her out of the jam she's got into by refurbishing the hotel and setting it up as a night spot.

Dodges Gas Problem

It seems not to have occurred to anyone that a nitery at such an out-of-the-way spot would be up against the transportation problem. In spite of the topical nature of all the gags (most of them are aimed at victory gardens, rationing, etc.), the war seems to have vanished from the scripters' calculations at this point.

But, this being a musical comedy, the thing is no sooner said than done, and first thing you know the joint is slicked up and the band is playing to empty houses. Rochester, however, saves the day by discovering gold in the Victory garden, and what with a gold rush on, the hotel pays off, after all.

Late in the course of the film, somebody seems to have decided that the piece needed a villain, because Ann's grandfather's lawyer belatedly turns up with some dastardly intentions toward the girls. This part of the plot is executed in almost frantic haste, and hurried out of the way before the final clinch.

Another thing to which the discerning are apt to take exception is a hill-billy sequence in which Martin's entourage pick up a couple of backwoods people and put them in their show. It is not only improbable, since they have a kid, almost too shy to show her face in one scene, singing in the next before a big audience, without any diffidence at all, but it is in rather questionable taste. Exploitation of poverty and ignorance as comic relief ought to have been given up by now.

Summation and Shorts

To sum up, the cast is so far superior to their material that their manful struggles with the loosely jointed plot and the limping dialogue hardly avail, and the film is effective only when it is concentrating on music and dancing.

Notable among the shorts is one entitled "The Manu Killers," dealing with a hunting expedition in Key West. Howard Hill, whom the film calls the world's greatest archer, and a Seminole Indian named Mike Osceola are seen hunting barracuda, shark, a 250-pound sea turtle and an alligator. They do it with nothing but bow and arrow or their bare hands. Very exciting. Also there is the ubiquitous "Women in Blue," about the WAVES, and latest news.

HEDDA HOPPER

Wherefore Art 'Romeo and Juliet'

Hollywood, Calif., July 16.—It cost Jeanette MacDonald plenty of her own cash to sing "Romeo and Juliet" in Canada. She hasn't yet been signed to sing it at the Metropolitan. It would be smart for Jeanette and Nelson Eddy to team up for another picture—quick. . . . Ella Raines, under contract jointly to Charles Boyer and Howard Hawks, gets her third picture chance with Eddie Bracken in "Hail the Conquering Hero." . . . Virginia Weidler, at 16, is getting a thrill that few 16-year-olds ever have. She's having her first trip to New York and spends most of her time walking back and forth between two theaters where her name is up in lights, announcing her pictures, "Best Foot Forward" and "Youngest Profession." . . . Gertrude Lawrence promised her company a farewell party after the closing night, but it didn't go through, for a very amazing reason.

JEANETTE MacDONALD

No, Thanks

When Humphrey Bogart signed a straight seven-year contract at Warners, he hoped at the end of that time he'd be able to buy a yacht as big as the one owned by Jack Warner. Two years of that contract have expired, and the other day Humphrey not only turned down Errol Flynn's yacht but also his boss', which he could have had for peanuts. Jack had lent it to the Coast Guard. They turned it back to him. "But," says Bogart, "My 30-footer is the sweetest looking ship I've ever laid me peepers on. They can keep the big fellows." . . . Garbo came out of her shell and attended a showing of "Stage Door Canteen" at Jack Warner's home. Among the 50 guests present were the Sol Sosenblatts and Diana Barrymore.

Stranger Things Has Happened

I don't think it will happen, but wouldn't it be funny if Joan Crawford was hired back by Metro to do a part in "Kismet," which suits her right down to the ground? . . . For her next Army tour, Joan Blondell has learned to do a bubble-and-fan dance. Says she, "I like to see the boys jump. The least I can do is to please them." . . . Mary Parker has it bad for Helmut Dantine, but he's being cagey, which is smart of him, now that he's palsy-walsy with Errol Flynn. . . . They're making bets that Tommy Dorsey won't sign that seven-year picture contract offered him by Metro. . . . Dore Schary's "The First Fifty Years," which means our business, is coming along by leaps and bounds. He's got Louis Jacobs and Russel Crouse writing it. . . . Paul Whiteman, jr., is running his papy's 700-acre farm in Rosemont, N. J., this summer.

Who's Next?

Frank Vincent is more than an agent. He's Cupid to his stars. At his Arrowhead home, Barbara Hutton became Mrs. Cary Grant. He arranged the marriage plans of Rosalind Russell and Freddie Brisson. Rosalind Russell attended the marriage at the Vincent home of Janet Blair and Sergt. Louis Busch. It also was attended by Janet's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lafferty, my Altoona, Pa., neighbors. Janet was dressed in chartreuse, even to her shoes, and carried a bouquet of orchids. . . . Orson Welles and Rita Hayworth showed up at the Players Club. Orson got Harry Rosenthal to play a samba, then got up and demonstrated how it should be done. . . . Mrs. Jo Swerling, wife of the writer, has had a very serious operation in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, so "Life Boat," which Jo is writing, has been postponed till August.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, July 16.

Wednesday night on Broadway a soldier, in New York on a special assignment, suddenly saw the signs announcing the premiere of "For Whom the Bell Tolls." At the Rivoli's box-office he was told that no more tickets were for sale. He waited, forlornly, in the lobby, until a stranger offered: "Want to see the picture, soldier? Here's an extra ticket" . . . And that's how Pvt. Donald Friede, former Hollywood agent, happened to see "For Whom the Bell Tolls"—the movie he had sold, for Ernest Hemingway, to Paramount—the movie for which he had represented Dudley Nichols, who wrote it, and Ingrid Bergman, its costar.

INGRID BERGMAN

One of the reasons why Giraud came here from Africa at this time with such fanfare was to make the Axis believe that the invasion of Sicily was being postponed until his return . . . There will be additional indictments in the Haizer Wright case. Wright, who was indicted on a charge of failing to register as a Japanese agent, has been working at his copy desk job for the Daily News the past three nights . . . A Third Avenue antique dealer named Carlebach will bring a libel suit against Albert C. Barnes, the argyrole king and noted art collector, for statements contained in a letter about a misdirected package.

Monday night Capt Alzeis Klotz came to the Monte Carlo Beach Club carrying a copy of Wendell Willkie's book, "One World." It bore a cryptic inscription by the author: "You will—if" . . . Captain Klotz piloted the plane in which Willkie flew around the world. This week he purchased a copy of the book about that flight and brought it to Willkie's office for autographing. "Now remember," said Captain Klotz, "I expect to be your official pilot if you're elected President of the United States" . . . "You will—if," replied Willkie, and wrote that promise on the fly-leaf.

Dave Driscoll and John Whitmore spent three months carrying sound equipment in the black markets which sold meat, and obtained 20 hours of recorded conversations . . . M-G-M will convert Band Leader Vaughn Monroe into a singing cowboy actor . . . The Fair Employment Practices Committee will open 12 regional offices in America . . . Nelson Poynter, who headed the Hollywood branch of the OWI's movie division, doesn't expect to return to Government service.

Much ado is being made this week by the sudden discovery that a radio dramatization of the life of Franklin D. Roosevelt is being broadcast to Latin America as good-will propaganda. One skeptical Washington correspondent, doubting the authenticity of some of the material, cited as an example the story of the President and a Groton classmate running away from school at the age of 16 to enlist in the Army at the outbreak of the Spanish-American War. The two youngsters, who thought they were old enough to become soldiers, never arrived at the recruiting office—for they were returned to school, suffering from measles . . . The story is authentic. It appeared in this column on January 13, 1941. The President told it to my wife and me when we visited the White House a few days earlier. And he consented to my printing it.

James Waterman Wise, editing a collection of letters from servicemen, "Very Truly Yours," wrote to William Allen White, the famed editor of the Emporia Gazette, asking for interesting letters. "The soldiers who write to me," replied the astute editor, "write only to be sure that they get the Gazette on time"

The 350 soldiers who had toured in "This Is the Army," slept in second-rate hotels, ate in second-rate beaneries and finally arrived in sunny, glamorous Hollywood to make the movie version of the Irving Berlin show. "Men, here we are in Hollywood at last," the sergeant addressed them, when they lined up at the Burbank studio. "Here are beautiful women, luxurious hotels, steaks every day. Here you are about to become movie actors. I know this sounds too good to be true. Well it is! Get down to the railroad yard pronto and unload the scenery, the props and everything else off that train. And report back here in time for mess."

Backgrounds of Inter-American Defense Board Members Are Diverse and Impressive

Mexican Delegate Is Former Chief of Staff

This is another in a series of stories about the Inter-American Defense Board. The last will appear Monday.

By Patricia Grady

Though certainly varied in background and personality, the delegates of the Inter-American Defense Board have one feature in common. They all speak English. Some fluently, some haltingly, some chokingly—but learning English is the No. 1 endeavor for all of them when they arrive in Washington.

Here are a few more sidelights on the men who make up the policy-planning board that wrestles with the problems of defending this hemisphere.

BRIG. GEN. LUIS ALAMILLO Flores: A former Chief of Staff of the Mexican Army, this tall, scholarly Mexican Military Attache is one of the youngest generals in his nation's army. He has recently returned from North Africa, where he has been an observer, and what he has learned there will probably find its way into a military book before long. He and his dynamic wife have collaborated on several books, though the piano-playing senora modestly refrains from putting her name on the covers. A stirring orator, General Flores served as military attache in France for 10 years, founded the War School of Mexico and served as its head.

VICE ADMIRAL ALFRED W. JOHNSON: This tall, slender, blondish admiral is the United States Naval expert on the Board. Most of the commands of this Spanish-speaking officer have been with air units. His friendly, likeable wife doesn't speak Spanish as fluently as her husband but manages to "get around" in the language. The admiral has seen action in the Spanish-American war, the Philippine Insurrection and World War I. A former director of Naval Intelligence, he was at one time our Naval Attache in Chile.

COL. AGUSTIN ALBAN BORJA: This former Chief of the General Staff of Ecuador and his country's Military Attache here will talk with enthusiasm at the drop of a hat about social reforms. Blue-eyed and dark-haired, Colonel Borja and his titian-haired wife are a popular social combination. A cavalry officer, he has served as Military Attache in Colombia and Peru. He was at one time chief of police of El Guayas Province and Undersecretary of the Ministry of National Defense.

COL. ANTONIA PARODI: A stocky, blond aviator, Argentina's Military Attache is a qualified balloon and international pilot. In the early years of aviation, Colonel Parodi set a number of records. He made the first night flight in America, broke the distance record for a flight with a passenger in 1917 and a year later broke the altitude record. He and his golden-haired wife entertain beautifully.

COL. STENIO CAIO DE ALBUQUERQUE LIMA: The twinkle in his brown eyes contradicts the quiet, reserved manner of Brazil's Military Attache. His attractive wife is an effervescent conversationalist, always bubbling about her latest enthusiasm. Her three children do not keep her from having outside interests. An artillery officer, he has served as chief of general staff of coast artillery and was appointed to represent Brazil on the special cabinet on the inauguration of the President of Mexico.

COLONEL MEDARDO FARIAS: This quietly capable Uruguayan Military Attache for Air has travelled extensively during his military career that started in artillery and has continued in aviation. He and his wife, who has difficulty with English but speaks French fluently, are a good host and hostess team. They make their home in McLean Gardens with their 6-year-old son and 4-year-old daughter.

LIEUT. COL. ERNESTO BUENAVENTURA: This former Director General of Aviation of Colombia is his air-minded nation's Military and Air Attache here. His wife and three young children have not yet joined him in the Capital. At one time aide-de-camp of the President of the republic, the colonel has been chief of studies of the School of Aviation at Cali and assistant to the inspector general of the army.

Collis Cherrington Allen Bride of Lieut. McKee

Ceremony Takes Place in Fort Myer Chapel; Reception at Army-Navy Club

At an afternoon ceremony at the Post Chapel in Fort Myer, Va., yesterday Miss Collis Cherrington Allen, daughter of Maj. Hugh A. Allen, U. S. Army, retired, and Mrs. Allen, became the bride of Lieut. John Lloyd McKee, jr., son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. John Lloyd McKee of Washington. Chaplain Thomas W. B. Magnan officiated at the 6 o'clock ceremony. Capt. C. M. Oakey, jr., of Camp Campbell, Ky., sang the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in old ivory satin fashioned with a square neckline trimmed with a wide border of rose point lace, and a fitted basque waist. The full skirt extended into a train 3 yards long and her full-length sleeves were trimmed with cuffs of the rose point. Her full-length veil of illusion fell from a coronet of seed pearls, and she carried a white prayerbook to which was pinned a cluster of white orchids.

Mrs. Hugh A. Allen, jr., sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honor and was gowned in yellow lace and net with a headdress of matching net which fell from a band of fresh flowers. She carried a bouquet of mixed flowers in shades of lavender.

Miss Jean Holden was the maid of honor and was gowned to match the matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. W. B. Woodson, jr., Mrs. C. M. Oakey, jr., Mrs. E. L. Poland, jr., and Miss Grace M. Norris. They were gowned in blue and carried yellow flowers.

General McKee, father of the bridegroom, was the best man, and the ushers were Maj. Hugh A. Allen, jr., Capt. David Ramsey, Lieut. Gerry Swartzle, Lieut. Noel Story and Lieut. Stacy Hulse.

The bride attended George Washington University and Lieutenant McKee was graduated from West Point in 1942.

Barber-Hatton Wedding Here

The marriage of Ernest Gwinn Barber and Mrs. Emma Larson Hatton took place here recently with the Rev. George Brown officiating.

Mrs. Barber, who taught for a number of years in the Friends School here, came to Washington from Minnesota.

Mr. Barber is the son of Mrs. Blanche Murray Barber of Washington, whose family has been identified with the Capital since its earliest days, and the late John Gwinn Barber. The Barbers stem from one of the oldest of Maryland colonial families, one member of which was Bishop Pinkney of the Maryland Episcopal Church.

After a wedding trip the couple will make their home in Arlington, Va.

Margaret Killian Betrothed to Lieut. Madden

Edwin A. Killian of Pittsfield, Mass., has announced the engagement of his daughter, Miss Margaret Killian, to Lieut. William James Madden, jr., of Harrisburg, Pa.

The bride-elect is field secretary for the National Council of Catholic Women in Washington, and prior to taking that post she was with the display advertising department of the New York Herald Tribune. She attended the University of Washington in Seattle.

Lieutenant Madden is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and the Temple University School of Law. He is now with the Corps of Military Police at Fort Eustis, Va.

Anis Azer Gives Luncheon At Legation

Representatives of the various missions and Government departments having to do with the Middle East Supply Center were guests yesterday at a luncheon given at the Carlton by Anis Azer, Counselor of the Egyptian Legation and Egyptian Commercial Counselor.

The luncheon honored Comdr. R. G. A. Jackson of the Royal British Navy, Chief of the Middle East Supply Center, who is in Washington for a brief visit in connection with the work of the center.

Ranking guest was the Chilean Ambassador, Rodolfo Michels. Others in attendance were William Clayton, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Edward R. Stettinius, jr., Lend-Lease Administrator; Hassein Enan Bey, Undersecretary of State to the Egyptian Ministry of Agriculture; Paul Alling, Chief of the Division of Near East Affairs of the State Department; Sir Louis Beale, Coordinator of Empire and Allied Requirements; Frederick Winant, U. S. representative to the Middle East Supply Center, and John P. Dawson, Chief of the Near East Section of BEW.

Also there were Robert H. Brand, head of the British Food Mission; W. O. Hart, advisor to Sir Arthur Salter of the Combined Shipping Adjustment Board; A. B. Christelow, Civil Secretary of the British Ministry of Supply; J. S. Dent, Second Secretary at the British Embassy; Gordon Merriam of the State Department's Division of Near East Affairs; Russell Smith, Acting Chief of the Blockade and Supply Board of BEW, and William Stone, Assistant Director of BEW.

In addition were Livingston Merchant, Assistant Chief of the Division of Defense Materials of the State Department; William C. Trimble, Assistant Chief of Exports and Requirements of the State Department; F. E. Perkins of the same division, and Boutros Dassily, Egyptian delegate to the Hot Springs Food Conference.

Air Minister Is Feted at Stag Dinner

Fetes for the visiting Brazilian Minister for Air, Dr. Joaquin Salgado, had a definite masculine accent yesterday when the Brazilian Ambassador, Carlos Martins, entertained at a stag dinner in his honor. Earlier in the day he was honored at a luncheon at the National Airport given by the Civilian Aeronautic Authority.

The greater part of the guests at the Embassy last evening were uniformed members of the Brazilian and United States services. Maj. Gen. Leitao de Carvalho and Vice Admiral Alvaro Rodrigues de Vasconcellos headed the list of Brazilian officers that included Col. Vasco Alves Secco, Col. Armando de Souza e Mello Araripoia, Capt. Joao da Cruz Secco, filho, Comdr. Amorim do Valle, Lieut. Col. Enrique Fleiuss, Col. J. de Faria Lima, Capt. Pamplona Pinto and Capt. L. de Oliveira Sampaio.

Gen. Henry H. Arnold was among the guests, as were Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Maj. Gen. G. E. Stratemeyer, Brig. Gen. William E. Hall, Rear Admiral R. E. Davison, Capt. Edmund Brady, Comdr. E. C. Beck, Col. J. C. Selser, Col. Kenner Hertford, Lieut. Col. John D. Gillette, Lieut. Col. J. V. Sayao Cardozo, Capt. Isaac Cunha and Maj. I. M. Iribira Guerreiro.

The Undersecretary of the Navy, James Forrestal, was present, as were the Assistant Secretary of State, Adolf Berle; Maj. Gen. James G. Ord, Lawrence Guggan, Philip Bonsal, Allan Dawson, Herbert Feis, William Burden, Walder Sarmanho, Fernando Lobo and A. C. de Alencastro-Guimaraes.

Diplomat Gives Luncheon At Mayflower

Entertaining recently at one in a series of small luncheons were the Minister-Attache at the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Danis.

The luncheon took place on Thursday at the Mayflower. Guests included the former French Premier and Mme. Camille Chautemps, the Minister-Counselor at the Polish Embassy and Mme. Kwapiszewski, the Agricultural Attache at the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray and Baron and Baroness Stackelberg.

Corley-Brown At Camp Lee

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Hilda Mae Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse A. Brown of Washington, to Lieut. Hilbert A. Corley, U. S. A.

The ceremony was performed in the Quartermaster School Chapel at Camp Lee, Va., at 11:30 o'clock on the morning of July 16, following the bridegroom's graduation from the Officer Candidate School. The Rev. Eugene C. McConley officiated, and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Bernice Burke was maid of honor and Lieut. Theron S. Johnson, U. S. A., was best man.

Lieut. Corley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus N. Corley, also of Washington. Immediately after the ceremony Lieutenant and Mrs. Corley left on their wedding trip to Asbury Park, N. J.

It's 'Capt. Ward' For Chief of Hospital Corps

Even in Washington, noted for its rapid rise in uniformed fortunes, the case of Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward has set something of a promotion record.

Commissioned as a first lieutenant in the American Women's Hospital Reserve Corps two months ago, Mrs. Ward this week received her captain's bars. Story behind the promotion was the work Mrs. Ward has done in setting up a unit of the corps in Washington in that short time.

With the promotion came a decoration. She has been awarded the Efficiency Ribbon for conscientious and loyal service in or with the medical division by the national directors upon the recommendation of the commander, Col. Luvia Willard.

League Shop Moving Today

The Junior League shop, "Outgrown," where the clothes that no longer fit someone else's child may be found to fit yours, has grown out of its present space and will be closed for six weeks, starting today. During this time the shop will be moved into larger quarters on the second floor of its present location at Massachusetts Avenue and Twentieth Street. Chairman of the project is Mrs. James D. Henry. The project manager is Mrs. David Porter Guest.

Ensign Bogart Visits Parents Here

Ensign Ralph M. Bogart, U. S. N. Air Corps, is spending a few days with his parents, Capt. I. C. Bogart, U. S. N., and Mrs. Bogart, at their home in Chevy Chase, Md.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Popovers filled with creamy scrambled eggs as pictured here are just right for a breakfast dish when you want to show that there's something different to serve. After popovers have finished baking, cut off the tops and fill full of scrambled eggs. Set the tops on eggs and serve while piping hot.

A philosopher once said, "It is ridiculous to worry about a thing unless you can do something about it." Well cooks are not exactly worried that they are not going to have enough to cook, but they are rightfully concerned that they must serve nutritious meals. First they must count their rations points, then wisely buy energy-yielding foods.

Martha Ellyn

That half pound of sugar per person per week has proved to be much more adequate than was thought when the rationing of it was started. Red points being what they are, homemakers sometimes find it a bit difficult to manage the fat situation. That means the wisest possible use must be made of each tablespoon of fat.

Perhaps the most efficient use of shortening is in bread varieties. Two tablespoons of shortening will make four loaves of bread, 9 biscuits or 18 muffins. And the thrifty use of bacon fat and clear drippings helps save shortening when used in muffins, biscuits, pancakes, waffles and for seasoning.

When you make breads with enriched flour you supply a plentiful source of protein, that needed nutriment which is likely to be shy these days when meat is so difficult to obtain. Rich in vitamin B, niacin and iron, enriched flour is one of the best revered cookery ingredients.

One of the most tantilizing of the quick hot breads is popovers. If you are thinking of popovers as just a hot bread to be eaten with a bit of butter and jam, then you haven't explored the possibilities of these tender hot bits.

Popovers have a special place on summer meals. Served with creamy scrambled eggs, flaky fish in cream sauce, or vegetable combinations in cheese sauce they contribute in a big way to a meal.

Popovers filled with scrambled eggs will make a grand dish for Sunday morning breakfast, be it served at 9 o'clock or high noon. Here's a suggested menu using them:

Breakfast Menu

Orange Juice
Chilled Cantaloupe
Popovers with Scrambled Eggs
Broiled Bacon Coffee

And don't think you can't make popovers that will "pop." You can if you give attention to the procedure of making them. The rise or fall of the popover depends upon:

1. The proper preparation and heat of the pans.
2. The proper mixing of the ingredients.
3. The right temperature at which they are baked.

POPOVERS WITH SCRAMBLED EGGS

Sift together 1 cup sifted enriched flour and ½ teaspoon salt. Beat 2 eggs and add ¾ to 1 cup milk. Add to flour mixture and beat to a smooth batter. Add 1 tablespoon melted shortening. Beat 3 minutes. Fill hot greased iron muffin cups or greased glass custard cups 2-3 full and bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, about 25 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate, 350 degrees and bake 15 minutes longer. Cut tops from popovers and fill with scrambled eggs. Yield: 8 popovers.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

When it's hot, babies get thirsty. What they need is boiled water; not warm, for that is nauseating; not hot, because that is not refreshing; not iced or ice cold, because that is a shock to the stomach. Just cool water, fed from a spoon or a cup or a bottle several times a day, is ideal.

Despite the mother's assumption her baby must be thirsty, there are many well-fed babies, whose formulas contain quantities of water (plus the water content of fresh milk and the water present in oranges and perhaps added to them,) which provide fluid needs. Such babies will have no more water to drink. No effort should be made to force water. Baby should have the opportunity to drink and the decision to drink or not to drink should be his.

Mrs. C. C. has had the hardest time getting her baby to drink water. "I have to force it with a teaspoon. Is it essential to add sugar? How can I get him to take it?"

"My 3-month-old baby is always fussy and cranky. He weighs 18 pounds and gets enough milk, water and orange juice. He has several bowel movements a day. Is it essential to give camomile tea to babies? Is it all right to rock the baby to sleep? What should I do to get rid of his fussiness?"

First, you stymie me by asserting he has enough milk, water and orange juice. I'd like an opportunity to judge that, since he weighs about 6 pounds more than the average baby of his age. That would seem to indicate some discomfort from overfeeding. Fussiness could easily result from that.

He may be fed too often during the day. Such a big baby may not need food oftener than three times a day, probably four at the most. You would help me and allow me to help you if you would tell me exactly what you are doing so I might be able to point out any possible corrections.

Camomile tea was an old-fashioned remedy for colic but it would seem more pertinent to find out why the baby needs any remedy. If his fussiness comes from indigestion, alter his diet and he won't need anything. Water cannot quench thrist when it contains sugar. Besides, baby gets enough sugar in its formula and more might add to his digestive burdens.

If a child were in real pain and needed the comfort of its mother's arms and the soothing offices of rocking, then I would not deny it to him. But to put a well child to sleep by rocking seems to me a most thankless service. It rapidly becomes such a necessity the child cannot go to sleep without it.

It is a good plan never to cultivate any habit which might be difficult to continue indefinitely. Rocking would be that type of habit.

Our leaflet, "Feeding From 2 to 9 Months," will help you to see how new foods are added to the diet. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

These Women!

"We have great plans for you as an actress, Miss Cronk. After a little grooming you will tour the Army camps, sell bonds at victory rallies, serve in canteens, and attend functions in Washington."

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

How do you feel about it: Wouldn't you rather know the truth, that you can count on exactly so much food? Then, if it turns out there is a little extra, have it come as a pleasant surprise?

Edith Barber, food authority and consultant on cookery, told producers and consumers holding a food forum in New York recently, that she is sure women generally would prefer to know the facts and not be planning on something they won't be able to get.

"What we would all like to see," Miss Barber went on to say, "is a much more definite, basic plan which would inform us that our supplies would not drop below a specific minimum. For example, I would like to see our meat rationing go down to the minimum. Then, if there is enough meat, the allowance could be increased. But we would like to know that we are not to be deprived of meat beyond a certain point."

This expert has come to the conclusion that "there just aren't any soy beans" for the housewife, and "what is the use of writing about how nutritious they are when they are not on the market?" (There's a sentiment you will echo if you have been on a fruitless search for soy beans!)

All nutrition-minded homemakers have been thoroughly sold on having fresh fruit or tomatoes every day. That's a campaign that has been going on for some years. But along comes rationing, and tomatoes are high up on the scale of points, and you have to look to other sources of vitamin C. It's all rather baffling.

I agree, one of the most reassuring things our harassed ration board could do would be to tell us, straight from the shoulder, what we have to face in the future, in the way of shortages, and just what foods we can expect and, as soon as possible, in what quantity. That change should go quite a long way toward allaying the apprehensions of the woman who must manage, somehow or other, to give her family three good meals a day.

Our food consultant also stressed these points for the benefit of the homemaker in our national nutrition program:

Milk guaranteed to children, and possibly a small amount for adults.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Easy Jobs

Only a few years ago at this time they were storming the outer citadels of offices—those fresh?faced girl graduates—in search of jobs. They walked bravely wearing masks of youthful self-assurance to hide their scared and hopeless feelings inside. For everywhere they went it was the same discouraging refrain, "No vacancies now" . . . "No, we're really firing instead of hiring" . . . "What experience have you had?"

But now how different! "All the graduates who want jobs can have them," states the recently released report on the eighth annual survey of employment for college graduates made by the Northwestern Life Insurance Co.

"Women," says the report, "are being inducted into all the usual women's jobs and also as junior executives, personnel officers, salesmen and sales executives, and into engineering and accounting." War industry offers three to ten war jobs for every engineering graduate available, man or woman, says the report, and is absorbing business administration and other seniors. Also—and this will indeed seem strange to those who remember the job treks of the '30s—the report emphasizes that starting salaries are establishing "new highs."

Youth Now Finds Its Jobs Waiting

How fine it is that young women, and such young men as are remaining, can leave college finding places of work waiting for them, finding a world eager for their services! How fine that they are being spared those months and even years of waiting and fear and self doubting and frustrating idleness so many of them knew in the depression! And yet what a mockery that only the supreme tragedy of war would have made this possible!

Moreover, because easy jobs and easy money of today are created by an unnatural situation, they hold great psychological hazard for youth. The employment report, in discussing the attitude of the graduates, says significantly, "A few appear to be developing exaggerated ideas of their salary values." This attitude is even more true of youthful workers lower in the scale educationally. All of these are due for a bitter awakening even though the postwar world should turn out to be as rosy as the most optimistic hope.

Besides, for youth's own sake, a settling down and a readjustment of values is necessary. While Heaven forbid that we should ever offer to youth again the hopeless world of depression days, yet the present industrial joyride, if continued, would lead to personal shoddiness, mental softness, decadence.

How Prepare For Aftermath?

Can anything be done now to prepare for the blow of postwar readjustment particularly as it will affect young people?

Many colleges, the report states, are working on the problem, making analyses of the ability of graduates who have left for varying types of war service in order to help them later with employment problems. Also the colleges are helping undergraduates to train on varied and long-range plans.

Economists, statesmen, industrialists, labor leaders all are busy on plans to meet employment problems of the future, to build a world that will give everyone the opportunity to work. But this is also a problem of the citizens, of the fathers and mothers of the youth this program will primarily affect, and of youth itself. The votes and vices of the citizens will determine the final fate of postwar plans. They will also determine what relation this Nation will bear to the world of the future, a relation that will definitely affect the home industrial picture.

Wise decisions in these matters can be made only on the basis of information, study, thought. If parents and youth itself are too lazy minded, too absorbed in their newly attained easy jobs and easy money to begin grappling with these problems now, they will coast toward economic catastrophe as surely as their lazy and self-absorbed predecessors did toward war.

Beta Sigma Entertains

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

Often the public thinks of clubwomen as formidable reformers, vice chasers, campaign launchers, tea sippers, time wasters and etc. . . . just use your imagination. Just for the sheer fun of it, let's rip the illusion veil with a few backstage glimpses.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

Today, I give you a few of Washington's Zonta Club members—their fads, fancies, phobias, likes and dislikes.

Nancy Tuft Moore was born in London, while her father, Colonel Moore, was on a two-year detail there. Before she could inform any lasting impressions she was whizzed back to Columbia, S. C. Then followed trips to the Philippines, Honolulu, Guam, China, Japan.

While in Manila she visited a beautiful Anglican Cathedral. There was a magnificent organ but no organist. Her friends prevailed upon her to try the instrument—she did. After a few months study, she became the official organist. Upon returning to New York she studied at Syracuse University and was awarded Bachelor and Master degrees in music.

Now organist and choir director at Georgetown Presbyterian Church, she has developed three choirs and a Sunday school orchestra. To take up the slack in her daily program, she is, among other things, a member of the Arts Club; a seven-time blood donor. Also she has served as registrar of the District of Columbia Chapter American Guild of Organists.

Don't call Ruth Atwater by telephone and say, "Do you know who this is?" This makes her see red. Her chief hobby is people but not those who don't identify themselves over the phone.

Pleasant Sarah Carick, the club's former publicity chairman, can you tell you all in the ins and outs of girdles. That's her stock in trade—at least part of it. Dogs and motoring are her favorite pastimes — now she's thwarted on both. Unable to keep a dog in her apartment, she compromised with a collection of china and glass canines. Overcrowded buses and streetcars are her chief vexations.

Emma T. Hahm loves birds, trees and flowers. What brings her blood pressure up is the prospect of having to convert the domicile's heating plant to coal.

Jennings Lawler's weakness is for old things . . . antiques and heirlooms. Pitchers with history are her chief collector's items. She abominates cats that kill birds.

Friendly, understanding Etta Mai Russell's pet hate is cruelty to animals, especially to dogs. She is an excellent cook, and has a definite flair for artistic interior decoration. She writes poetry, too—sprouts more ideas in a minute than most people in a month.

By the way, Zontians are continuing their luncheon meetings through July. Wednesday a representative from the Norwegian Embassy will be the guest speaker at the get-together, scheduled for 1 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

Not Inflation Conscious

As a whole the peoples of this country are not sufficiently concerned with stabilization of wages and prices. They have not known the terror of inflation that followed the Revolutionary War here and in Germany after World War I. This is the opinion of Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and public member of the War Labor Board.

Guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club's dinner meeting Thursday night, he discussed the maintenance of membership and the Little Steel formula, placing particular emphasis on the principles advocated by the Labor Board.

Dr. Graham told how the maintenance of membership had protected the rights of management and a stabilization of production—how it had averted thousands of strikes.

Mrs. Hale T. Shenefield, first vice president, presided and Mrs. May Thompson Evans introduced the speaker. Guests at the speakers' table included, in addition to the officers, Mrs. Charles Harron, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, Admiral and Mrs. Edward Stitt, Judge and Mrs. Edgerton and Judge Marion Harron.

Bits of This and That

Y. W. C. A.—USO dance (orchestra on three floors), 9 o'clock tonight . . . Zeta Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held a tea this week at the Willard Hotel . . . Thomas J. Hamilton, author of "Appeasement's Child," will be guest speaker at the Woman's National Democratic Club's luncheon meeting Monday at 12:30 o'clock.

Party Is Scheduled

In honor of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, a garden party will be given at headquarters of the National Woman's Party, 144 B Street Northeast, July 20—4 to 6:30 o'clock.

It also honors women's independence day, ninety-fifth anniversary, which gave the inception of woman's suffrage at the Seneca Falls Convention, July 19 and 20, 1848.

Hostesses will include officers of the District branch: Miss Mary Elizabeth Downey, Mrs. Anne B. Mitchell, Miss Mathilde Bahar, Dr. Miriam Oatman, Mrs. Isabelle Boone, Mrs. May F. Rhoades, Mrs. K. W. Greene, Mrs. Cecil Broy, Miss Lurene R. Hicks, Mrs. Mary Short, Miss Naomi Wheeler, Mrs. Dora G. Ogle.

Mrs. Wiley will give a talk on "The Evolution of Women."

Wallace-Jones Row Puts Hull In Top Spot

By Cecil B. Dickson

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night emerged as dictator of the Nation's foreign financial as well as political policies as a result of President Roosevelt's merger of all Government import, export and foreign financing agencies into a new Office of Economic Warfare.

Thus, for the first time, the foreign political and financial policies are to be coordinated and unified. This is expected to bring about more unity in this country's foreign affairs, which has been lacking for years because of separate operations by many Government agencies in foreign lands.

It will eliminate competitive bidding by American Government agencies for the same materials in foreign countries, and will bring the power of the State Department in the making of loans and advances through the Office of Economic Warfare.

In his order abolishing the Board of Economic Warfare and creating a new Office of Economic Warfare out of Reconstruction Finance Corporation subsidiaries operating in foreign lands, the President even directed the all powerful War Mobilization Board to make its policies conform with the foreign policy of the Government "as defined by the Secretary of State."

Crowley in Charge

The specific order was:

"The functions of the office of war mobilization shall include the authority to arrange for the unification and coordination of the activities of the Federal Government relating to foreign supply, foreign procurement and other foreign economic affairs in conformity with the foreign policy of the United States as defined by the Secretary of State."

As a result, Leo T. Crowley, the new director of economic warfare, will operate the agency, will have charge of the Export-Import Bank and numerous RFC corporations, and any part of BEW which he may not liquidate, but the basic policies must adhere to the State Department's foreign policy in all deals.

This will give the State Department vast pressure power on certain foreign countries, which have evaded this Government's policies by going through the BEW and certain RFC agencies to get funds or sell goods.

Thus, when a foreign government or its nationals get out of line, the State Department can direct either the War Mobilization Office or Office of Economic Stabilization to withdraw financial support or stop buying.

Also, it will prevent the recurrence of complaints from South American countries that the State Department, the BEW and RFC subsidiaries' policies and activities were in conflict.

Considers Self Fired

Perkins, meantime, had one of his former press agents tell reporters that since Crowley was appointed director of the new office and the President had abolished the BEW, that he considered himself "fired," and no resignation was necessary.

He called in his top flight men to suggest that they keep the BEW going until Crowley, who was out of the city, yesterday, can take steps to liquidate or transfer the agency to the new setup. Perkins also let it be known that he would confer with and assist Crowley in any manner. Otherwise he has no plans.

When asked at his press conference what was going to happen to Perkins, the father of the abolished food stamp plan, the President said it was up to Crowley.

The President also said Crowley would remain alien property custodian for a while, along with being head of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

William R. Lewis Buried in Oak Hill

Reilly Heads District War Finance Group

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau yesterday appointed John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, as chairman of the recently created District War Finance Committee.

RUST

The new committee combines the former War Savings and Victory Fund Committees here and will direct the Third War Loan drive, starting September 9, as well as continuing the sale of Series E, F and G War Savings Bonds.

At the same time Secretary Morgenthau announced the resignation of H. L. Rust, jr., as chairman of the District War Savings Committee. He will continue to serve in the war bond program as charman of the advisory committee of Reilly's group. The Secretary said that Rust was entitled to his release in order that he might return to his business.

"The War Savings Committee," said Rust, "has an enviable record, made possible only by the team play between the volunteers and response by our citizens. * * *"

Reilly, former vice chairman of the War Savings Committee, said "We need the support of every wage earner in America. The purchase of war securities now will hasten victory and serve to control inflation."

Reilly is a native of Washington, immediate past president of the District Bankers Association and president of the Cosmopolitan Club of Washington. He is a graduate of Georgetown University Law School and a member of the District Bar Association.

Many to Be Reclassified

Selective Service local boards have been ordered to reclassify all occupationally deferred Government employes for whom no official deferment has been requested by the agency employing them, Selective Service officials announced yesterday.

Under present law, it was pointed out, no Government employe is entitled to occupational deferment unless he is listed on a replacement schedule approved by the proper State director of Selective Service or his deferment is requested by the employing egency.

First reports from local boards indicate that a substantial percentage of registrants deferred because of employment by the Government are not listed on replacement schedules and their deferments have not been requested in accordance in the existing regulations.

Junk Jalopy Drive Opens

The District Salvage Committee has launched a drive to "Junk Jalopies in July" and clean up the last of the old cars and trucks left in the District after the "Jalopy Junking Roundup" of April when 600 were brought in.

The same procedure of filling out donation blanks furnished by the Salvage Committee will be followed as in April. With the blanks the committee would like to have titles except in the case where the jalopy is a wreck.

There are thousands of old cars not in use, according to Horace Walker, exeeutive secretary for the District, and arrangements have been made to pick them up after the donation blanks have been received. Members of the Metropolitan Police Department got behind the previous drive and helped the committee to acquire the large number in April, and their help has been requested for the "July" clean-up.

Hoping to turn the jalopies into scrap metal the salvage committee is asking for quick action on cars in dead stock, private garages, back yards, public garages and parking lots, and in possession of automobile dealers, and insurance and finance companies.

Drunk Rehabilitation Laws Favored

The District Commissioners yesterday advocated a change in the present laws to give the courts and the welfare department a chance to rehabilitate chronic drunks.

The recommendation, which was released by Commissioner Guy Mason, was in answer to a letter written the Commissioners by Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the Committee on Civic Affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, terming the present District method of handling inebriates "futile and cruel."

LaRoe recommended measures be adopted here similar in effect to those now in force in California and Idaho. His letter recommended an institution be constructed in the postwar period for the care and rehabilitation of inebriates.

He said Welfare Director Ray Huff had made a study of the problem and had determined the necessary facilities would cost approximately $250,000. He termed this sum small in comparison to the amount of good that could be accomplished.

Commissioner Mason said: "This is not a new subject. The late Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen advocated such a step, and Municipal Judge Armond W. Scott more recently has urged it. The Commissioners are in favor of a change in the law to give the courts and the Welfare Department of the District of Columbia a chance to rehabilitate chronic drunks."

18 Indicted In Poultry Black Market

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., July 16.—Eighteen persons and three corporations in six States were indicted by a Federal grand jury today in what United States Attorney Stewart Lynch described as "the largest blow delivered to date at the poultry black market."

The indictment charged the group with conspiracy and paying over-ceiling prices aggregating more than $11,000 for upward of 350,000 pounds of poultry in Delaware. All the individuals are wholesale buyers.

One of those named, Fred Beckman, trading as Farmers Produce Co., of Columbus, Ohio, pleaded guilty soon after the indictments were returned. Sentence was deferred.

The indictments, climaxing an investigation by the Office of Price Administration, charged the defendants with "defrauding the United States Government by use of such evasive practices as double invoicing, payment of bonuses in cash or by checks on separate bank accounts, and keeping false records."

In addition to Beckman, those indicated are:

Mortimer J. Chuckrow, Herman Chuckrow, Irving J. Chuckrow and Joseph Chuckrow's Sons, Inc., Albany, N. Y., and Troy, N. Y.

Harry Smith, trading as Harry Smith Co., Indianapolis.

Thirty-third Street Live Poultry Corp., Hyman Haber, Isadore Haber, New York.

Hyman Carp and David Sokel, trading as Royal State Poultry Co., Detroit.

Jack Drucker, Sam Drucker and Morris Drucker, trading as Reliable Egg & Poultry Co., Cleveland.

SEE WHAT THE SHOE INDUSTRY HAS DONE TO AID THE WAR EFFORT

In 1942 the War Production Board's Order M-217 placed drastic wartime restrictions on shoe manufacturers. We in the shoe industry needed the fabled Seven League Boots to do the job—BUT IT HAS BEEN DONE! The Hanover Shoe's record is typical of what the entire industry has done to aid the war effort.

FOR EXAMPLE:

Twelve months ago there were 113 different styles of Hanover Shoes for men.
Today there are 47 styles in Hanover's complete line.

Twelve months ago there were many two-tone sports styles.
Today these sports styles are eliminated.

Today Hanovers come in two colors only—Army brown and black.

Today golfers must get along with what they have.

This willingness on the part of the whole shoe industry to cooperate fully and unselfishly with the War Production Board is making its impact felt. Tons of vital leather have been saved—much needed dyes, metals, crude rubber, textiles and other critical materials have been diverted to war uses. Immeasurable productive man-power has been conserved. The shoe industry and the Government have made our armed forces the best shod fighting men in the world.

SEE THESE WINDOWS! They are an astonishing demonstration of achievement. A complete picture of BEFORE and AFTER restricting Order M-217. At our 1343 F St. Store.

SEE WHAT THE SHOE INDUSTRY HAS ALREADY DONE

EQUALLY IMPORTANT—These restrictions have taken from civilians nothing that really matters. Frills have gone — solid value remains. Hanover still gives you good, sturdy leather for enduring wear—the same high grade of craftsmanship. These 1943 styles more than meet every requirement of long wear and good dress.
The Hanover name has long stood for integrity and value. We are still proud to put that name on the shoes we offer today.
